U.S. Propaganda Warfare Slated for Senate Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright leads his Senate Foreign Relations Committee today into a probe of how the United States is waging another side of the Viet Nam war — the propaganda battle.

He called Leonard H. Marks, chief of the U.S. Information Agency, to explain some of his agency's efforts to swing foreign opinion on the war, such as paying the fare for some 27 overseas journalists to visit Viet Nam.

Fulbright said he saw no reason to keep such an operation secret and added that the committee members also might want to question Marks about other USIA activities in influencing foreign opinion.

As the hearings open, the highest administration praise Fulbright has heard in months was still ringing in his ears.

Fulbright, who has been at odds with the Johnson administration for months over Viet Nam policy, drew lavish praise Tuesday from Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Humphrey lauded the Arkansas Democrat for "a great act of diplomacy." Humphrey referred to a statement Fulbright had made in an interview with The Associated Press in which he said Hanoi and Peking would be mistaken if they refused to negotiate an end to the war in the belief President Johnson stood alone in his policy.

As evidence that the President was not isolated in his policy, Fulbright contended that Congress was actually more warlike than Johnson.

After reading Fulbright's remarks, Humphrey invited him to his office.

"I called him on my own as a representative of the administration to say thank you," Humphrey told newsmen later.

"Many people are led to believe our nation is divided and might weaken our resolve," Humphrey added.

But he said this "statement by a leader of the loyal opposition should make crystal-clear to Hanoi and Peking" they would be mistaken in acting on that belief.

Volunteer Firemen Shun Village Pay

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Just about everybody else may be trying to get a pay raise but not the volunteer firemen in suburban Fairfax.

The village council received a letter Tuesday night from the Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association, signed by President Rollie French, which said the firemen had discussed the proposal to pay them.

"We do not desire any remuneration for any amount, and have absolutely no desire to add to the tax burden of the neighbors whom we serve," the letter read.

Japan Storms Cause At Least 30 Deaths

TOKYO (AP) — The death toll from storms that lashed southern Japan this week rose to 30 today as search teams continued to clear away debris from landslides and receding flood waters.

Eighteen persons were still reported missing and 12 injured as a result of the torrential rains that flooded more than 6,000 homes.

War Protest Brings Wild Shout Contest

Attorney Dragged From Hearing by Capital Police

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for a dozen antiwar witnesses stalked from a House Committee on Un-American Activities hearing today after a wild shouting match with committee members about removal of an attorney who was dragged from the room by three police men.

The lawyers, who represented all of the witnesses involved in groups denouncing U.S. involvement in the Viet Nam war, said they no longer could represent their clients after Arthur A. Kinoy, a middle-aged Rutgers University law professor, was expelled.

Kinoy, chief counsel for two witnesses who have challenged the constitutional basis of the hearings by the Committee on Un-American Activities, was removed at the order of Rep. Joe R. Pool, D-Tex., the acting committee chairman.

"Throw us all out!" said Kinoy's partner, William Kunstler of New York.

But after a brief recess, Kunstler and half a dozen other lawyers told the committee they were withdrawing, leaving their clients unrepresented before the committee.

At least 16 other persons were expelled today from the tumultuous hearings, bringing the two-day total to 33.

Pool said Kinoy was removed because he was being "obstreperous" and did not conduct himself in the professional manner the committee required of lawyers.

But the other attorneys disputed this. "I have never any time, ever seen a lawyer treated this way," Kunstler said.

Kinoy was dragged from the hearing room on orders of Pool after he had refused to halt his objections to testimony about his client, Walter D. Teague.

Teague, who is chairman of the U.S. Committee to Aid the National Liberation Front of Viet Nam, is one of 13 persons subpoenaed to testify at the hearings on bills aimed at Americans who aid the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

The hearing became a wild shouting match.

"Throw us all out!" said William M. Kunstler, one of the lawyers for Teague, after Kinoy was ejected.

Kinoy, a middle-aged Rutgers University professor, had challenged the testimony about his client by a recent Yale University graduate who works for National Review magazine.

Pool first ordered Kinoy to sit down, then directed he be ejected when he refused to shut off his torrent of criticism directed at testimony about to be given by Philip A. McCormack, 22.

Let's Keep the UFOs Unidentified!!

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Dayton may be the home of Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, which in turn is the home of the Air Force's UFO investigating center, but not everybody here wants to identify the unidentified flying objects.

Lay off, suggests Jim Fain in his Dayton Daily News column reprinted herewith:

"The Air Force is making a horrible mistake by investing money in university contracts to try to unlock the mystery of the flying saucers.

"If there is one lovable, totally harmless addition to life in the 20th Century, it is the flying saucer. These bright, fast-moving objects from outer space have turned up by the thousands since they made their debut almost 20 years ago.

"At no time has one caused the slightest harm to a living soul. They make no menacing gestures. They are usually noiseless. On the few occasions when sounds have been heard from them, the locale was remote, and the sounds were unlikely to disturb anyone's sleep.

"They are not selling anything. They bear no advertising messages, either for products or ideologies.

"They do not try to borrow money, tout horses, sell insurance or even cash a check. They do not call on the telephone, clog freeways, hustle aluminum siding, blacktop driveways.

"They have the innocence of babies, completely void of malice or guile. They flit through the skies, or hover over woodlands, winking at us all, cheerful as the evening star in October, slightly mischievous but never bad.

"Once, in simpler, happier days, the world was populated by all kinds of spirits. There were elves and fairies and goblins, leprechauns and poulter-geists.

"Few remain. We still have the Loch Ness monster but he is so harried by tourists that he stays beneath the surface longer than any nuclear submarine, popping up to recharge his batteries about once in five years.

"The world is too crowded now for the little people, for all the antic spirits who used to keep things lively and fun.

"Let us not chase away the saucers too.

"Fortunately, a university research grant is a leisurely approach, more designed to help with the problem of faculty retention than to move or shake. It is as well. Organized tourism or a hard-sell promotion might run the saucers away. They should be able to put up with a research grant."

Minor Hit-Skip Ends in Tragedy

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A hit-skip incident involving minor property damage developed into full-fledged tragedy Tuesday night.

The Ohio Highway Patrol said that about an hour after an automobile was reported to have inflicted minor property damage at an Interstate 90 rest area, the vehicle was spotted in front of a residence here.

A patrolman went up to the house and was admitted by Robert A. Toth, 26.

Then Toth went into a bedroom and shot himself to death, the patrol said.

Water Extension Move Initiated In City Council

An ordinance that would permit the sale of water beyond the corporate limits of Circleville was one of two measures held to first reading Tuesday night by City Council.

The water service extension proposal pertains to three specific localities bordering the city. They are: 1. Properties situated along Northridge Road from the present water main termination to a distance of 1,600 lineal feet along Route 188; 2. Properties within the Northwood Park Subdivision immediately north of Route 188; 3. Properties generally bounded by Renick Ave. on the West, Ohio St. on the south, Kingston Pike on the east and Route 56 and Mound St. on the north.

Also held for future action was an ordinance fixing and regulating the price rate for natural gas provided residents and firms of the city by Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc. It calls for a contract that would extend four years.

Water extension possibilities have been of primary interest to council for several weeks. Numerous requests for the service have been made since May.

ERVIN F. LEIST, city utilities head, has assured council his department has the potential to offer additional service. He noted earlier that the water the division currently is pumping an average of 42 percent of what it actually can produce.

However, Leist has requested a definite program be formulated before an extension program is undertaken. Last night's ordinance contains certain conditions that would govern the additional service.

These provisions note that property owners may enter into a contract with private firms to install extensions from existing water mains, with the understanding that the work will be done under supervision of the City Water and Sewage Department.

Additional sections point out that the contractor would pay for inspection and supervision of the work to be performed, that the completed extension would become the city's.

Solons Know Weeds Grow; Action Urged

Recent rains in this community have promoted a fine crop of weeds.

City Council was made aware of the problem Tuesday night. Numerous complaints from irritated property owners have been directed to the governing fathers.

One complaint was in the form of a letter from Mrs. Clinton Reed of Rosewood Ave. She invited councilmen to come take a look at what she terms a jungle along one section behind Rosewood.

In most cases, the complaints are lodged against absentee landlords or those who own empty lots and fail to keep them properly mowed. Residents in the areas concerned urge council to order corrective action.

COUNCILMEN John Jenkins, upholding the complaints, submitted one of his own when he leveled a blast against both railroads here for their lack of weed cutting.

Seeking advice on what steps should be taken, Jenkins asked this question: "Who has the authority to enforce a city ordinance that governs weed cutting?"

Although an answer to his query was not immediately forthcoming, it was agreed that the clerk of council would write a letter to the local Health Department.

STOCKPORT, England (AP) — A dagger was found today on the steps of the Stockport police station with a note containing a confession to two unsolved murders and a threat to strike again.

The note said: "My next victim will be a teen-ager. Ha ha — from the killer of Marjorie Hill and John Crossland."

Police said tests confirmed the dagger was the one used to murder John Crossland, 44-year-old theater doorman who was stabbed in a lonely lane in nearby Cheadle Sunday night.

Marjorie Hill was stabbed to death in Bramhall Park, a few miles from Cheadle, a year ago.

MIG21 Pilot Is Defector

Iraqi Delivers Jet to Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Iraqi air force captain has defected to Israel in a MIG21 — a Soviet-built delta-wing airplane that can fly twice the speed of sound.

It was the first time the Soviet's top military aircraft had been put in Israel's possession and Brig. Mordechai Hod, air force commander, told newsmen Tuesday, "It is a comfortable feeling to have your enemy's top plane in your possession."

Hod was referring not to the Soviet Union, but to Iraq and also Egypt and Syria which have been supplied the same plane by the Kremlin.

"We have many plans for the plane," he said without saying what they were.

Hod said he had received a letter from the pilot 10 days ago saying he intended to defect. But Hod said he thought it "sounded to good to be true."

The pilot's name was withheld.

Nevertheless, Hod issued orders in the Iraqi air force and four months in the Soviet Union learning to fly the MIG21.

Air Strikers Ponder New Settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striking machinists deliberated today whether to approve a hefty new contract and end history's worst airlines strike or risk tough legislation that also would be a historic first.

Top officials of the AFT-CIO International Association of Machinists held high hopes that a wage escalator clause plus a 56-cent wage hike and other benefits would persuade the 35,000 strikers to approve the proposed three-year contract in voting Friday.

The strikers rejected a White House agreement July 31 that left out the escalator clause, which would provide up to an extra 6 cents an hour if living costs continued their sharp upswing.

Officials of United, Eastern, National, Northwest and Trans World airlines said they could get some of their planes back in the air within hours if the strikers approve the proposed contract and end the strike now in its 41st day.

The three-year contract, retroactive to Jan. 1, would provide three 5 per cent wage hikes, the second next Jan. 1 and the third on May 1, 1968 for some 19,000 line mechanics who now earn $3.52 per hour.

Cincy Pilot Ditches His Plane in Atlantic

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Neil B. Ficke, owner of a dry cleaning business in Cincinnati, Ohio, was on a vacation trip when he ditched his light plane in the Atlantic Ocean near Nassau Tuesday.

Ficke and two passengers, Mr. and Mrs. Pierson of Cincinnati, were picked up by a Liberian tanker and are being taken to Venezuela.

A Coast Guard spokesman said Ficke apparently ditched alongside the Liberian vessel when he saw the Cessna 310 wasn't going to make it to land.

U.S. Bomber Crashes in Viet Village

26 Natives Die As Ammo Blows; Pilot Escapes

SAIGON (AP)—A U.S. Marine jet fighter-bomber heavily laden with bombs and fuel crashed into a Vietnamese village shortly after takeoff from Da Nang airport today. At least 26 villagers were killed.

The pilot, identified as 1st Lt. Walter J. Doherty, 22, Gold Hill, Ore., miraculously escaped serious injury. His parachute failed to open after he ejected, but his fall was broken by a tree.

A spokesman at the scene said the plane, an F8E Crusader, was carrying two 1,000-pound bombs. One of the bombs exploded as did 20mm cannon ammunition.

The crashing plane leveled a number of small Vietnamese homes. Others were set afire.

On the battleground, a U.S. Marine amphibious assault force of more than 1,000 men, which landed Tuesday on the shore of the South China Sea 100 miles east of Saigon, moved inland into dense jungle and swamplands believed to be hiding a Viet Cong division.

The landing was unopposed. By noon today, advance elements of the Marine force had reached coastal Highway No. 1 without meeting the enemy.

The Leathernecks came ashore in amphibious tracked vehicles and helicopters from seven U.S. Navy ships, including the assault carrier two Jima from which the helicopters were launched. The landing was preceded by a saturation bombardment of the shore by cruisers, destroyers and rocket ships.

The Marines, who called their operation Deckhouse 3, were landed as a blocking force for Operation Toledo, a combined U.S.-Vietnamese search and destroy sweep that began Aug. 10 against the Viet Cong 5th Division.

Elsewhere in South Viet Nam, ground location was light, a result in part of heavy monsoon rains.

In a talk with newsmen, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said more American troops were definitely needed in South Viet Nam. But he declined to predict the eventual U.S. commitment, declaring this depended upon what the Communists did.

Over North Viet Nam, American bombers hammered without letup at oil storage areas, highway traffic and other targets.

Navy, Air Force and Marine pilots flew 131 missions Tuesday. They hit at 18 oil depots and road traffic all the way from the Hanoi-Haiphong area south to near the demilitarized zone that separates North and South Viet Nam.

Pilots claimed hits on oil dumps 15 miles northeast of Haiphong and on other north and northwest of Hanoi and said large fires and secondary explosions were touched off.

No American planes were reported lost in the heavy forays. A Hanoi radio broadcast claimed that four U.S. planes were shot down.

Auto Safety Bill Faces House Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House votes today on a bill that would require 1968 model motor vehicles to meet federal safety standards. Passage appears certain.

The standards for passenger cars, trucks and buses, would be prescribed by the secretary of commerce not later than next Jan. 31 and would become compulsory not more than one year later.

The initial requirements presumably would follow those now in force for government-purchased cars, which must be equipped with head rests, padded dashboards and safety belts or safety harnesses. New standards based on one year of experience would be set by Jan. 31, 1968.

5 Feared Dead in Ohio Plane Crash

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A charter plane carrying five persons and missing since Tuesday on a flight from Mansfield to Chattanooga, Tenn., was found today in a field in Licking County and the Ohio Highway Patrol said "no sign of life" was noted about the wreckage.

The plane had taken off from Mansfield at 6:44 a. m. EST Tuesday in what was estimated as a two-hour and 15-minute flight, and a flight plan had been filed by the pilot, Paul Root, 47, of Shelby. His plane, owned by Richland Aviation Co., was a six-place Cessna 310.

His passengers all were executives of Sanitary Inc., of Perryville, Ashtand County, a pottery firm which makes bathroom equipment.

They were Kenneth Edmondson, 55, Perryville, liaison man for the firm; Theodore Smith, 43, of Loudonville, foundry supervisor; Arthur Young, 47, of Route 2, Perryville, a pattern maker, and Henry Moyers, 48, of Englewood, near Dayton, who joined the firm only recently as foundry superintendent.

Cincy Pilot Ditches His Plane in Atlantic

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Neil B. Ficke, owner of a dry cleaning business in Cincinnati, Ohio, was on a vacation trip when he ditched his light plane in the Atlantic Ocean near Nassau Tuesday.

Ficke and two passengers, Mr. and Mrs. Pierson of Cincinnati, were picked up by a Liberian tanker and are being taken to Venezuela.

A Coast Guard spokesman said Ficke apparently ditched alongside the Liberian vessel when he saw the Cessna 310 wasn't going to make it to land.

U.S. Bomber Crashes in Viet Village

26 Natives Die As Ammo Blows; Pilot Escapes

SAIGON (AP)—A U.S. Marine jet fighter-bomber heavily laden with bombs and fuel crashed into a Vietnamese village shortly after takeoff from Da Nang airport today. At least 26 villagers were killed.

The pilot, identified as 1st Lt. Walter J. Doherty, 22, Gold Hill, Ore., miraculously escaped serious injury. His parachute failed to open after he ejected, but his fall was broken by a tree.

A spokesman at the scene said the plane, an F8E Crusader, was carrying two 1,000-pound bombs. One of the bombs exploded as did 20mm cannon ammunition.

The crashing plane leveled a number of small Vietnamese homes. Others were set afire.

On the battleground, a U.S. Marine amphibious assault force of more than 1,000 men, which landed Tuesday on the shore of the South China Sea 100 miles east of Saigon, moved inland into dense jungle and swamplands believed to be hiding a Viet Cong division.

The landing was unopposed. By noon today, advance elements of the Marine force had reached coastal Highway No. 1 without meeting the enemy.

The Leathernecks came ashore in amphibious tracked vehicles and helicopters from seven U. S. Navy ships, including the assault carrier two Jima from which the helicopters were launched. The landing was preceded by a saturation bombardment of the shore by cruisers, destroyers and rocket ships.

The Marines, who called their operation Deckhouse 3, were landed as a blocking force for Operation Toledo, a combined U.S.-Vietnamese search and destroy sweep that began Aug. 10 against the Viet Cong 5th Division.

Elsewhere in South Viet Nam, ground location was light, a result in part of heavy monsoon rains.

In a talk with newsmen, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said more American troops were definitely needed in South Viet Nam. But he declined to predict the eventual U.S. commitment, declaring this depended upon what the Communists did.

Over North Viet Nam, American bombers hammered without letup at oil storage areas, highway traffic and other targets.

Navy, Air Force and Marine pilots flew 131 missions Tuesday. They hit 18 oil depots and road traffic all the way from the Hanoi-Haiphong area south to near the demilitarized zone that separates North and South Viet Nam.

Pilots claimed hits on oil dumps 15 miles northeast of Haiphong and on others north and northwest of Hanoi and said large fires and secondary explosions were touched off.

No American planes were reported lost in the heavy forays. A Hanoi radio broadcast claimed that four U.S. planes were shot down.

Auto Safety Bill Faces House Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House votes today on a bill that would require 1968 model motor vehicles to meet federal safety standards. Passage appears certain.

The standards for passenger cars, trucks and buses, would be prescribed by the secretary of commerce not later than next Jan. 31 and would become compulsory not more than one year later.

The initial requirements presumably would follow those now in force for government-purchased cars, which must be equipped with head rests, padded dashboards and safety belts or safety harnesses. New standards based on one year of experience would be set by Jan. 31, 1968.

Councilman John Simison said it would be somewhere near 1981 before the city could acquire property rights to all seven tracts involved. Crawford said it would probably take that much time before the city would be in a position to erect service department facilities there.

Holding the gas ordinance to its initial reading will allow councilmen more time to study all provisions of the new rate schedule. The measure indicates an increase, based on the amount of gas consumed.

Rates proposed under the new schedule are: 25 cents per 100 cubic feet for the first 1,500 cubic feet used; 7 1/2 cents per 100 cubic feet for the next 3,500 cubic feet; 8 cents per 100 cubic feet for the next 95,000 cubic feet; 7 cents per 100 cubic feet for all in excess of 100,000 cubic feet.

According to records, the rate ordinance currently in effect here lists: 25 cents per 100 cubic feet for the first 1,000 cubic feet used; 7 cents per 100 cubic feet for the next 3,000 cubic feet; 7 1/2 cents per 100 cubic feet for the next 95,000 cubic feet; 6 3/4 cents per 100 cubic feet for all in excess of 100,000 cubic feet.

Aviation Head To Look at Airport Sites

Norman Crabtree, Ohio Division of Aviation chief, is scheduled to come here Friday to look at suggested sites for possible location of a Pickaway County airport.

Crabtree will be joined by Pickaway County's Board of Commissioners plus two members of a local airport advisory group. At least five sites in the county currently are under study.

Joining the aviation head on the inspection tour will be commissioners Lloyd Melvin, Charles Morris Jr. and Wayne Hines. Advisory group members slated to take part are Alden D. Bray and John Dunlap Jr.

One of the inspection objectives is to determine if any of the sites meet requirements in order to be eligible for state assistance. Selection of a likely site also would permit local authorities to take initial steps in acquiring the land.

Running on down the progress chart, the next move would be to find ways and means to provide financing for land purchasing. State assistance, if granted, would be for building purposes only.

Showdown Nearing on Reserve Call

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators face a showdown today on a proposal to give President Johnson authority to call up thousands of young military reservists — now exempt — for possible combat duty in Viet Nam.

The President has not asked for such authority. The reserves proposal and other controversial riders — including a proposed $522.5-million slash — upset plans of Senate leaders to complete passage Tuesday of a massive $58 billion-plus defense money bill.

Needing a two-thirds majority to add their reserve callup proposal to the appropriation measure, Sens. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., based their appeal on fair treatment for draftees and volunteers in the Southeast Asian war.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, presumably with White House backing, has rejected congressional suggestions that the citizen-soldiers be called to active duty.

The Russell-Saltonstall proposal would permit Johnson to call to active duty for 18 months any ready reservist whose previous service was limited to training. Existing law limits the active service of a reservist to one year unless a national emergency has been called. Neither Congress nor the President has done so in the Viet Nam crisis.

Minor Injuries Listed in Mishap

Harold R. Boyer, 28, Route 2, Williamsport, suffered minor injuries in a single vehicle mishap 6:35 p. m. Tuesday eight miles west of Circleville on Route 104.

Boyer sustained minor injuries to his left hip and shoulder, according to Deputy Sheriff Charles Jones.

Deputy Jones said Boyer told him he lost control of his half-ton pickup truck. The vehicle, which veered off the highway into fencing and a ditch, was declared a total loss by the deputy.

The deputy cited Boyer for reckless operation. He is to appear in Circleville Municipal Court.

War Protest

cers who took Kinoy out of the room held his arm around the attorney's throat. One of the other lawyers said Kinoy, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, was "being choked."

But Pool said outside the room that the police used "the correct amount of force."

Pool restored some semblance of order and then listened to objections and statements from the attorneys.

The second day of the hearing — at which 17 persons were arrested Tuesday — began quietly with only about 100 persons in the corridors and some 300 seated in the room.

But the picture quickly changed as six persons were hustled out for applauding anti-war statements by a witness.

One witness, Richard Mark Rhoads of New York, charged the committee was conducting "a circus intended to harass."

"I came to the committee to tell as much of the truth as I can before being interrupted by the committee," Rhoads said when asked to swear he would tell the truth.

Rhoads, who said under questioning that he is a member of the pro-Communist Progressive Labor party and a Communist, told the committee that "the most hated government in the world today is the government of our country."

Phillip A. Luce, an author and former member of the Progressive Labor Movement, testified that the antiwar groups represented only a small minority of American youth. Since leaving the Progressive Labor Movement, he said he has been "trying to tell other young people about the pitfalls of communism."

The Progressive Labor Movement, he said, is a pro-Peking group expelled from the U.S. Communist party for "leftist deviation."

It was something of a switch for Luce who three years ago was ejected from a committee hearing dealing with a trip to Cuba by a group called Students for Travel to Cuba. His testimony Tuesday prompted Jeffery Gordon, a Progressive Labor party leader from New York, to leap to his feet and shout:

"Let's stop this fink testimony! U.S. get out of Viet Nam!" Gordon was hustled out of the chamber and taken to a police station.

All 17 who were arrested were charged with disorderly conduct.

City Solons Okay Radio, Clerk Posts

Ordinances authorizing the employment of a clerk - typist for the City Safety Department and a radio operator for the police department were enacted Tuesday night by Circleville Council during a busy legislative session.

Duties of the clerk - typist will consist of secretarial and clerical work for the police and fire departments and other assignments as directed by the safety director or police chief. The salary was set at $1.50 per hour, based on a 44-hour work week.

The radio operator will be hired for the 3 to 11 p. m. shift. The wage rate will be $1.75 per hour.

The legislation provided for appropriation of money necessary to fill both posts.

Also enacted were two ordinances appropriating money for police functions. One authorized $500 for maintenance and repair of patrol cars and other equipment. The second provided $200 for purchases of incidentals.

A single resolution adopted accepted taxation amounts for the city as certified by the Pickaway County Budget Commission.

Parolees, Petty Thieves Rated as Draft-Proof

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hundreds of draft age Hamilton County men are not even being considered for military service because of past court records.

One of the eight Hamilton County draft boards reports that more than a thousand potential draftees in its area have been deferred because they have been convicted of criminal offenses. At least one other board has an equal number.

There are also 150 current parolees of draft age who cannot by law be drafted.

But Spencer E. Turner, regional supervisor of the Adult Parole Authority of Ohio, says, "It would do many of these men a world of good to serve in the armed forces. The old saying, 'the army makes a man out of them' is still true."

But the days when a judge could tell a wayward youth, "son, you join the service or I'm going to send you to jail," are past according to a spokesman for the U. S. Army Recruiting Command at Ft. Monroe, Va.

"We want men who are loyal, have honor, respect discipline, law and authority. We can't take men who demonstrate their inability to conform to accepted standards of conduct. They can hardly be expected to measure up to the demanding environment of military service," the spokesman said.

When a potential draftee with a court record comes up for induction, his record is reviewed by the Army. "Each case is judged on its individual merits," the spokesman at Ft. Monroe said, "but generally persons convicted of murder, armed robbery or other major felonies are not accepted nor

Norman Crabtree, Ohio Division of Aviation chief, is scheduled to come here Friday to look at suggested sites for possible location of a Pickaway County airport.

Crabtree will be joined by Pickaway County's Board of Commissioners plus two members of a local airport advisory group. At least five sites in the county currently are under study.

Joining the aviation head on the inspection tour will be commissioners Lloyd Melvin, Charles Morris Jr. and Wayne Hines. Advisory group members slated to take part are Alden D. Bray and John Dunlap Jr.

One of the inspection objectives is to determine if any of the sites meet requirements in order to be eligible for state assistance. Selection of a likely site also would permit local authorities to take initial steps in acquiring the land.

Running on down the progress chart, the next move would be to find ways and means to provide financing for land purchasing. State assistance, if granted, would be for building purposes only.

Showdown Nearing on Reserve Call

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators face a showdown today on a proposal to give President Johnson authority to call up thousands of young military reservists — now exempt — for possible combat duty in Viet Nam.

The President has not asked for such authority.

The reserves proposal and other controversial riders — including a proposed $522.5-million slash — upset plans of Senate leaders to complete passage Tuesday of a massive $58 billion-plus defense money bill.

Needing a two-thirds majority to add their reserve callup proposal to the appropriation measure, Sens. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., based their appeal on fair treatment for draftees and volunteers in the Southeast Asian war.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, presumably with White House backing, has rejected congressional suggestions that the citizen-soldiers be called to active duty.

The Russell-Saltonstall proposal would permit Johnson to call to active duty for 18 months any ready reservist whose previous service was limited to training. Existing law limits the active service of a reservist to one year unless a national emergency has been called. Neither Congress nor the President has done so in the Viet Nam crisis.

Minor Injuries Listed in Mishap

Harold R. Boyer, 28, Route 2, Williamsport, suffered minor injuries in a single vehicle mishap 6:35 p. m. Tuesday eight miles west of Circleville on Route 104.

Boyer sustained minor injuries to his left hip and shoulder, according to Deputy Sheriff Charles Jones.

Deputy Jones said Boyer told him he lost control of his half-ton pickup truck. The vehicle, which veered off the highway into fencing and a ditch, was declared a total loss by the deputy.

The deputy cited Boyer for reckless operation. He is to appear in Circleville Municipal Court.

War Protest

cers who took Kinoy out of the room held his arm around the attorney's throat. One of the other lawyers said Kinoy, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, was "being choked."

But Pool said outside the room that the police used "the correct amount of force."

Pool restored some resemblance of order and then listened to objections and statements from the attorneys.

The second day of the hearing — at which 17 persons were arrested Tuesday — began quietly with only about 100 persons in the corridors and some 300 seated in the room.

But the picture quickly changed as six persons were hustled out for applauding anti-war statements by a witness.

One witness, Richard Mark Rhoads of New York, charged the committee was conducting "a circus intended to harass."

"I came to the committee to tell as much of the truth as I can before being interrupted by the committee," Rhoads said when asked to swear he would tell the truth.

Rhoads, who said under questioning that he is a member of the pro-Communist Progressive Labor party and a Communist, told the committee that "the most hated government in the world today is the government of our country."

Phillip A. Luce, an author and former member of the Progressive Labor Movement, testified that the antiwar groups represented only a small minority of American youth. Since leaving the Progressive Labor Movement, he said he has been "trying to tell other young people about the pitfalls of communism."

The Progressive Labor Movement, he said, is a pro-Peking group expelled from the U.S. Communist party for "leftist deviation."

It was something of a switch for Luce who three years ago was ejected from a committee hearing dealing with a trip to Cuba by a group called Students for Travel to Cuba. His testimony Tuesday prompted Jeffery Gordon, a Progressive Labor party leader from New York, to leap to his feet and shout:

"Let's stop this fink testimony! U.S. get out of Viet Nam!"

Gordon was hustled out of the chamber and taken to a police station.

All 17 who were arrested were charged with disorderly conduct.

City Solons Okay Radio, Clerk Posts

Ordinances authorizing the employment of a clerk-typist for the City Safety Department and a radio operator for the police department were enacted Tuesday night by Circleville Council during a busy legislative session.

Duties of the clerk-typist will consist of secretarial and clerical work for the police and fire departments and other assignments as directed by the safety director or police chief. The salary was set at $1.50 per hour, based on a 44-hour work week.

The radio operator will be hired for the 3 to 11 p. m. shift. The wage rate will be $1.75 per hour.

The legislation provided for appropriation of money necessary to fill both posts.

Also enacted were two ordinances appropriating money for police functions. One authorized $500 for maintenance and repair of patrol cars and other equipment. The second provided $200 for purchases of incidentals.

A single resolution adopted accepted taxation amounts for the city as certified by the Pickaway County Budget Commission.

ALL OVER THE WORLD — People are becoming interested in Ohio festivals all over the world, according to the Ohio Development Department which serves as a clearing house for information about the state. Christing Koerner displays some of the items used to answer requests for festival data. Circleville's Pumpkin Show is high on the list of inquiries. Printed brochures are provided interested parties through the department which displays a huge "pumpkin" sign (upper left) in its offices listing the dates of the annual event.

Parolees, Petty Thieves Rated as Draft-Proof

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hundreds of draft age Hamilton County men are not even being considered for military service because of past court records.

One of the eight Hamilton County draft boards reports that more than a thousand potential draftees in its area have been deferred because they have been convicted of criminal offenses. At least one other board has an equal number.

There are also 150 current parolees of draft age who cannot by law be drafted.

But Spencer E. Turner, regional supervisor of the Adult Parole Authority of Ohio, says, "It would do many of these men a world of good to serve in the armed forces. The old saying, 'the army makes a man out of them' is still true."

But the days when a judge could tell a wayward youth, "son, you join the service or I'm going to send you to jail," are past according to a spokesman for the U. S. Army Recruiting Command at Ft. Monroe, Va.

"We want men who are loyal, have honor, respect discipline, law and authority. We can't take men who demonstrate their inability to conform to accepted standards of conduct. They can hardly be expected to measure up to the demanding environment of military service," the spokesman said.

When a potential draftee with a court record comes up for induction, his record is reviewed by the Army. "Each case is judged on its individual merits," the spokesman at Ft. Monroe said, "but generally persons convicted of murder, armed robbery or other major felonies are not accepted nor

Preventing Vandalism

Vandalism is not nearly as rare as it formerly was. Nowadays one often reads of schools, churches and parks being horribly damaged by a person or persons unknown. Only occasionally are the obviously sick culprits caught.

Even homes do not escape the current spate of vandalism. While robbery may be the principal motive, many robbers (especially the young ones) compound the crime by committing unthinkable vandalism within the house.

Eggs hurled against walls, flour mixed with water and tossed on floors, curtains ripped, phones torn out, upholstery slashed, and other psychotic acts too numerous to mention are committed.

There will be vandalism as long as there are mentally disturbed people roaming the streets. But if examples are made of those vandals who are caught by the police and found guilty as charged in court, many potential destroyers of public and private property will be less likely to allow their base urges free rein.

Most vandals are like those miserable creatures who make obscene and threatening phone calls. They are sick in the head and need treatment. However, unless they are certifiably insane at the time of their acts, they should first of all be punished to the full extent of the law.

And the news of their punishment should be well publicized as a warning to other morons of like inclination.

Hardly Anyone Listens Anymore

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Are you looking for a profitable hobby or a way to earn a good post-retirement income?

Well, why not become a paid listener? It is a new and wide open field.

Hardly anybody in America listens any more.

Employees don't listen to their employers.

Children don't listen to their parents.

Students don't listen to their teachers.

Husbands don't listen to their wives.

Waiters don't listen to their customers.

There are even signs that Congress no longer hears everything that Lyndon B. Johnson says.

The art of listening is about as dead as scrimshaw, which is the art of carving on whalebone.

People will do almost anything for each other except listen to each other. The guy who will gladly give you the shirt off his back balks at merely lending you his ear. Today it's even hard for a minister to recite the marriage ritual without either the bride or the bridegroom interrupting him to ask, "How's that again? What did you say?"

About the only people who do listen are psychiatrists and those who are paid to bug your telephones. And there is considerable suspicion among patients that psychiatrists don't really listen all the time.

While no one is willing to listen, everybody is more than willing to talk. Everyone has something he wants to get off his chest.

This means there has to be a tremendous market for good listeners. Why not tap it? Why not turn your idle hours to financial advantage by becoming a paid listener? Why not rent your ear?

As soon as I get my pension, I'm going to start a new career as a listener.

Whenever anyone grabs me by the lapels and starts wagging his jawbone, I'll silently hand him a printed folder which says:

"You are speaking to a man who earns his living by listening. So, please button your mouth unless you are willing to pay my rates."

What do you think of the idea? What, you didn't hear a word I said? See what I mean? Nobody listens.

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLTMAN, M.D.

Can cold sores of the lips be caused by a poor diet or vitamin deficiency?

Cold sores have been attributed to many causes, some real and some fanciful. Technically they are known as herpes simplex and almost always are caused by a virus.

They can develop at any season of the year, in any climate and in any geographic area.

Overexposure to the sun, stomach and intestinal upsets and allergy can be contributing causes. Emotional upheavals and stress have also been accused as being responsible.

Inadequate diet and vitamin deficiency are not directly the cause of cold sores. The only possible relationship could be that these conditions lower the body resistance and invite the virus that causes this condition.

Antibiotics and cortisones are used with discretion by physicians. They seem to be effective in speeding the healing process.

Some people are particularly prone to recurring attacks of herpes. One attack of this viral infection does not seem to produce any immunity from further attacks.

Is there any new and effective way to reduce weight without taking pills?

The "diet of the month club" has not yet officially released its new miracle method of losing weight.

It must be completely apparent by now that weight watchers and weight gainers have no choice but to count calories. There are no shortcuts, with or without pills.

There is a simple law that is unalterable and that is if you consume more calories than you spend in daily activities a weight gain must follow.

One other factor in the control of weight is important and that is the possibility of some underlying general medical condition. Low thyroid activity can produce over-weight.

Fluid can be retained in the body tissues under some circumstances. All such possibilities must be checked out before any diet regime can be established.

The notion that some people come from a "fat" family is false. There are no direct hereditary tendencies to over-weight. People living in the same family acquire the same poor eating habits and gain their weight by the uncontrolled intake of calories.

The psychological causes of overeating are well known to physicians. Patients must become psychologically ready to lose weight and to keep it off.

New fads, special expensive pills and complex machines only help to avoid coming face to face with the accusation that all of us "just plain eat too much."

Fear is a man-made disease. It can be easily transmitted from one person to another.

The late Sinclair Lewis confessed unashamedly that whenever he received a review copy of a new book of non-fiction, the first thing he did was to look in the index to see if his name was there.

Author Ben Hecht once cashed in on this universal weakness. In a second-hand bookshop, Hecht came upon several hundred copies of a technical treatise, marked down to a fraction of the original list price. The book was over 1,000 pages long, hopelessly dull, often unintelligible, and carried no index.

Hecht mailed copies anonymously to all his most important friends, with a typed note inside that read, "I believe you will wax justifiably indignant when you come across the numerous insulting references to you in this book."

The Business World

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether it concerns unit volume of goods produced, dollar total of sales, number of jobs, trend of prices, profits, debts and interest rates — most of the news these days is of things going higher.

Many of the official figures announced this week set records. And this in an economy that has been straining for, and achieving, new highs for many months.

What isn't going up sometimes gets the most headlines. Stock prices are shaky. Housing starts are off. Money available for lending, or borrowing, is in tight supply. Car production is at a seasonal low after a setback in late spring.

But most of the economy still is booming. Some of the glow is due to rising prices. Inflation makes things look more prosperous than they really are. But there are some solid figures, too.

Industrial production, which measures unit output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities, has hit a new high, with still more of a climb in prospect. Price inflation may have been the incentive for some of the busy outpouring of goods and materials, but is not reflected in the figures on unit output itself.

Dollar volume of sales in many fields bears the imprint of inflation. But merchants report unit sales also are up as a prospering public spends more — even while it grumbles at higher prices.

Defense spending increases are beginning to show up in industrial output figures. But business equipment production also has increased.

Steel output has climbed sharply this month, as the factory shutdowns for vacations dwindle and customers plot fall production schedules.

Total employment hit a record 76.4 million in July. Some of the gain could be traced to increased orders for defense needs, but much of it was for producing the goods and services that a prosperous public is expected to demand in the weeks and months just ahead.

For many, rising wage scales are offsetting climbing prices. For many others, inflated living costs spell only problems.

'LBJ' Common Denominator

By John Chamberlain

They keep saying that "local issues" have been the determining factors in some of the recent Democratic upsets in the primaries. But when a "local issue" recoils in fairly quick succession against three incumbent U. S. Senators who were running with the Lyndon Johnson brand on them, it is perhaps inevitable that the defeats, in the eyes of skeptics on Capitol Hill, should be attributed more to the "LBJ" common denominator element than to purely local troubles.

Capitol Hill critics of Johnson began to put two and two together, as they see it, when Senator Ross Bass of Tennessee lost out in the Democratic Senatorial primary to Governor Frank G. Clement. Bass, as was noted some time ago in this column, was in bad with a number of his constituents because he had voted in the Senate for repeal of 14(b), the section of the Taft - Hartley Act which permits Tennessee, among other states to retain its own right-to-work law. While Lyndon Johnson was never particularly fervent about repeal of 14(b) the effort to legislate universal compulsory unionism was still rated as an Administration measure by a crucial number of Tennesseans. What seems to complete the picture in the Tennessee situation is that Clement had gone around the State telling the people that Bass was a "rubber stamp for LBJ."

In the Tennessee gubernatorial primary Buford Ellington, who managed to beat a "Kennedy man," began his campaign by offering himself as the "friend of the President," but he quickly changed his tune when this seemed to be getting him little yardage. It could be that Ellington won solely because his opponent, John J. Hooker Jr., ran with the Bobby Kennedy label on him. Bobby and Lyndon are about equally popular, or unpopular, in Tennessee.

The licking taken by Ross Bass in the Tennessee primary caused a quick reassessment of the July defeat of incumbent Senator A. Willis Robertson by William B. Spong Jr. in the Virginia primary polls. Everyone had been saying that Robertson lost because of his age and the fact that the "bankers were for him." But now it is being whispered that Robertson missed out by a hair (he lost by a mere 611 votes) because he had the "LBJ brand" on him as chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Robertson had gone along with the fiscal and monetary policies of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Fowler, his fellow Virginian, and these policies, as it has seemed to the anti - LBJ element on the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, have obstructed the flow of capital in America without doing a good compensating job of either paying for the Vietnamese War or stemming the snowballing inflation. Whether it is significant or not young Harry Byrd, who was running for the other Virginia Senatorial seat, did not seek out any White House blessing. Byrd won.

Going back still further into the recent past, there is the June defeat of incumbent Senator Donald S. Russell in the South Carolina primary. Russell had originally gone to the Senate to fill out a portion of the term of Senator Olin D. Johnston, who died in 1965. He was, in effect, a "self - appointed" man, for he had resigned as Governor of the State with the full assurance that his successor would name him to the vacant Senate seat. Russell's opponent in the June primary, former Governor Ernest F. Hollings, made great forensic capital by talking of Russell as a "drop - out governor" as well as a "self - appointed Senator." The fact that Russell has been known as "LBJ's friend," where Hollings was a friend of the late John F. Kennedy, did not openly figure in the campaign. But now Russell's friends in Washington are saying that the "LBJ label" constituted a fatal drag on the Russell chances.

Whether the "LBJ brand" was the common denominator in the rejection of three incumbent Democratic Senators is a question that cannot easily be answered. But the apparent emergence of a pattern is disturbing to Democrats such as Senator Lee Metcalf of Montana and Governor Pat Brown of California, who aren't noticeably going out of their way to ask White House help in the autumn jousting.

Preventing Vandalism

Vandalism is not nearly as rare as it formerly was. Nowadays one often reads of schools, churches and parks being horribly damaged by a person or persons unknown. Only occasionally are the obviously sick culprits caught.

Even homes do not escape the current spate of vandalism. While robbery may be the principal motive, many robbers (especially the young ones) compound the crime by committing unthinkable vandalism within the house.

Eggs hurled against walls, flour mixed with water and tossed on floors, curtains ripped, phones torn out, upholstery slashed, and other psychotic acts too numerous to mention are committed.

There will be vandalism as long as there are mentally disturbed people roaming the streets. But if examples are made of those vandals who are caught by the police and found guilty as charged in court, many potential destroyers of public and private property will be less likely to allow their base urges free rein.

Most vandals are like those miserable creatures who make obscene and threatening phone calls. They are sick in the head and need treatment. However, unless they are certifiably insane at the time of their acts, they should first of all be punished to the full extent of the law.

And the news of their punishment should be well publicized as a warning to other morons of like inclination.

Hardly Anyone Listens Anymore

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Are you looking for a profitable hobby or a way to earn a good postretirement income?

Well, why not become a paid listener? It is a new and wide open field.

Hardly anybody in America listens any more.

Employees don't listen to their employers.

Children don't listen to their parents.

Students don't listen to their teachers.

Husbands don't listen to their wives.

Waiters don't listen to their customers.

There are even signs that Congress no longer hears everything that Lyndon B. Johnson says.

The art of listening is about as dead as scrimshaw, which is the art of carving on whalebone.

People will do almost anything for each other except listen to each other. The guy who will gladly give you the shirt off his back balks at merely lending you his ear. Today it's even hard for a minister to recite the marriage ritual without either the bride or the bridegroom interrupting him to ask, "How's that again? What did you say?"

About the only people who do listen are psychiatrists and those who are paid to bug your telephones. And there is considerable suspicion among patients that psychiatrists don't really listen all the time.

While no one is willing to listen, everybody is more than willing to talk. Everyone has something he wants to get off his chest.

This means there has to be a tremendous market for good listeners. Why not tap it? Why not turn your idle hours to financial advantage by becoming a paid listener? Why not rent your ear?

As soon as I get my pension, I'm going to start a new career as a listener.

Whenever anyone grabs me by the lapels and starts wagging his jawbone, I'll silently hand him a printed folder which says:

"You are speaking to a man who earns his living by listening. So, please button your mouth unless you are willing to pay my rates."

What do you think of the idea? What, you didn't hear a word I said? See what I mean? Nobody listens.

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

Can cold sores of the lips be caused by a poor diet or vitamin deficiency?

Cold sores have been attributed to many causes, some real and some fanciful. Technically they are known as herpes simplex and almost always are caused by a virus.

They can develop at any season of the year, in any climate and in any geographic area.

Overexposure to the sun, stomach and intestinal upsets and allergy can be contributing causes. Emotional upheavals and stress have also been accused as being responsible.

Inadequate diet and vitamin deficiency are not directly the cause of cold sores. The only possible relationship could be that these conditions lower the body resistance and invite the virus that causes this condition.

Antibiotics and cortisones are used with discretion by physicians. They seem to be effective in speeding the healing process.

Some people are particularly prone to recurring attacks of herpes. One attack of this viral infection does not seem to produce any immunity from further attacks.

Ohio Air Pollution Certain To Get Worse

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Man-made pollution is making it harder to breathe and it is getting worse.

You can take that from Robert A. McCormick, who should know what he is talking about.

McCormick is chief of the meteorology section of the U.S. Public Health Service's Taft Sanitary Engineering Center here which has been experimenting and forecasting air pollution since 1958.

"The problem is getting worse every day," McCormick says. And the worst time of the year for it is approaching—fall and winter, when air is more likely to be stagnant.

How dangerous is the air we breathe?

George C. Holworth, chief of the center's research and forecast unit, cites what happened at Donora, Pa., in 1948 as demonstrating "that lethal air pollution levels can occur in the United States."

For three days smog lay over Donora. Heavy fog settled in the narrow river valley where the town sits, trapping pollution material from large ironworks. Fog kept the sun from warming the ground and dispersing the pollutants.

In those 72 hours, 20 persons died. Thousands became ill.

Most of those who died were older and in ill health. The effects on people in normal health, Holworth said, "are subtle and occur over a long period of time."

But incidents such as Donora led the center to begin in 1958 trying to forecast when weather conditions might create potential.

It issued its first forecasts in 1960, for the eastern two-thirds of the United States. In 1963, forecasts were expanded to cover the rest of the country.

Now the center's specialists study weather forecasts and issue warnings any time they see conditions developing which might hold pollution in the air until they reach a dangerous level.

Fall and winter are the worst times, because colder temperatures result in less shifting of air masses. In warmer weather air on the ground rises as it warms and cooler air above sinks to replace it. This natural inversion or turning over of air masses carries pollutants — the fumes from industrial stacks, exhaust from cars and such—above the level where people are breathing the air and brings in fresh, unpolluted air.

The center does not issue local forecasts for small areas which might have temporary localized stagnant air situations.

Most forecasts usually cover wide areas, sometimes several states. A warning issued any time weather conditions seem right for 36 or more hours of that is, when a large mass of air becomes stationary over an area, so it would hold within that region the pollutants poured out by man's daily life.

There is more pollution in areas with large factories, but Holworth says the center's forecasts ordinarily "do not consider this, although they are influenced by it." The center's forecasts are based mostly on air movements which would trap pollution from any cause.

Mountains and similar land features influence air movement. A mountain valley could act like a large and deadly jar-seal the top with static air and pollution can't escape.

Not all the United States is subject to dangerous air pollution problems. In the midwest plain weather conditions "simply do not tend to stagnate."

These areas usually have a lot of wind, which causes the air over an area to be constantly shifted and changed. Florida also generally escapes the center's warnings—not because that state has no air pollution, but because wind and frequent rain tend to disperse or wash out pollutants.

McCormick said the center's advisories are general warnings and are not intended to replace local forecasts of air pollution such as smog reports issued in Los Angeles.

And, he said, "Out advisories can be improved on with the warnings issued on the smaller scale."

Holworth aid more research is needed to determine just when pollution will begin to build up and to predict just how bad the trouble might be.

Now, he says, the center's forecasters just predict how long weather conditions over an air might remain stable enough for the region to be under a pollution warning.

Holworth and McCormick feel the advisory are helping make the man in the street aware of air pollution problems. But the center has no control over whether its advisories are needed at the local level.

And said Holworth, "there is little the individual could do anyway. It would be up to community leaders whether to take action." Local authorities in an area under a pollution warning could act to reduce the hazard, he suggested, by having industries shut down or change to a different type of fuel which might cause fewer problems.

Farley Granger Returns To Hollywood for Films

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I left Hollywood because I didn't know my craft," says Farley Granger. "I was a star, but I knew nothing of the techniques of acting. I figured I'd better learn, or I'd be in trouble when the star aspects of my career wore off."

Granger has returned to a Hollywood career after a 13-year absence. He admits to being 41, but it's hard to believe. He still has the lean, boyish look — "Tennis and calisthenics help" — that thrilled female hearts in the postwar period.

His last movie here was "The Girl in the Red Velvet Swing" in 1955. He has returned for television shows and in repertory with Eva R. Gallienne's company, but his home remained in New York.

"Now I'm ready to settle down here again," he said. "There are some television shows in the wind, and a couple of movies, too. I think I can handle whatever comes."

He wasn't always so confident. As a North Hollywood high school student in 1943, he had the notion he wanted to be an actor and got a job with a Little Theater on Highland Avenue. That was the extent of his dramatic training. Samuel Goldwyn's scouts spotted him and he was signed to a contract, which began with "North Star."

After service in the Navy, Granger returned to find himself a bobbysox idol. He made a number of routine films and a few he enjoyed, notably "They Live by Night" and two with Alfred Hitchcock, "Rope" and "Strangers on a Train."

Granger engaged in a madcap romance with Shelley Winters which managed to reap a lot of mileage in the gossip columns and fan magazines. It also resulted in a comedy which costarred the pair — "Behave Yourself."

Said Farley: "The only trouble with that picture was that it wasn't funny."

Indeed he took a dim view of most of his films, and the view grew dimmer as he matured. In 1953 he decided it was time to make the break, even though picture offers were still coming.

The actor's return to the Hollywood scene will be signaled by his costarring with Julie Harris in the opening drama of NBC's Bob Hope Chrysler Theater on Sept. 14.

Safety Award Is Presented To Spangler

JERRY SPANGLER

Jerry Spangler, 214 W. Corwin St., was awarded a weekend for two at a Columbus motel in recognition of his outstanding safety suggestion.

Spangler's award served as grand prize in a July Safety Contest conducted at Du Pont's Circleville plant. Other weekly winners were Wendell See and James Cassidy of Circleville and Richard Redman of the Stoutsville community.

Theme of the safety program was "That Different One." Its purpose was to identify and make corrections on similar machines, tools and pieces of equipment which looked the same, but for some reason acted differently from another in a particular operation.

Spangler's suggestion was judged the best among 375 entries during July. The Safety program was handled by Du Pont's Circleville Research and Development Laboratory.

Ohio Air Pollution Certain To Get Worse

The Circleville Herald, Wed. Aug. 17, 1966
Circleville, Ohio

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Man-made pollution is making it harder to breathe and it is getting worse.

You can take that from Robert A. McCormick, who should know what he is talking about. McCormick is chief of the meteorology section of the U.S. Public Health Service's Taft Sanitary Engineering Center here which has been experimenting and forecasting air pollution since 1958.

"The problem is getting worse every day," McCormick says. And the worst time of the year for it is approaching—fall and winter, when air is more likely to be stagnant.

How dangerous is the air we breathe? George C. Holworth, chief of the center's research and forecast unit, cities what happened at Donora, Pa., in 1948 as demonstrating "that lethal air pollution levels can occur in the United States."

For three days smog lay over Donora. Heavy fog settled in the narrow river valley where the town sits, trapping pollution material from large ironworks. Fog kept the sun from warming the ground and dispersing the pollutants.

In those 72 hours, 20 persons died. Thousands became ill. Most of those who died were older and in ill health. The effects on people in normal health, Holworth said, "are subtle and occur over a long period of time."

But incidents such as Donora led the center to begin in 1958 trying to forecast when weather conditions might create potential.

It issued its first forecasts in 1960, for the eastern two-thirds of the United States. In 1963, forecasts were expanded to cover the rest of the country.

Now the center's specialists study weather forecasts and issue warnings any time they see conditions developing which might hold pollution in the air until they reach a dangerous level.

Fall and winter are the worst times, because colder temperatures result in less shifting of air masses. In warmer weather air on the ground rises as it warms and cooler air above sinks to replace it. This natural inversion or turning over of air masses carries pollutants — the fumes from industrial stacks, exhaust from cars and such—above the level where people are breathing the air and brings in fresh, unpolluted air.

The center does not issue local forecasts for small areas which might have temporary localized stagnant air situations.

Most forecasts usually cover wide areas, sometimes several states. A warning issued any time weather conditions seem right for 36 or more hours of that is, when a large mass of air becomes stationary over an area, so it would hold within that region the pollutants poured out by man's daily life.

There is more pollution in areas with large factories, but Holworth says the center's forecasts ordinarily "do not consider this, although they are influenced by it." The center's forecasts are based mostly on air movements which would trap pollution from any cause.

Mountains and similar land features influence air movement. A mountain valley could act like a large and deadly jar-seal the top with static air and pollution can't escape.

Not all the United States is subject to dangerous air pollution problems. In the midwest plain weather conditions "simply do not tend to stagnate."

These areas usually have a lot of wind, which causes the air over an area to be constantly shifted and changed. Florida also generally escapes the center's warnings—not because that state has no air pollution, but because wind and frequent rain tend to disperse or wash out pollutants.

McCormick said the center's advisories are general warnings and are not intended to replace local forecasts of air pollution such as smog reports issued in Los Angeles.

And, he said, "Out advisories can be improved on with the warnings issued on the small scale."

Holworth aid more research is needed to determine just when pollution will begin to build up and to predict just how bad the trouble might be.

Now, he says, the center's forecasters just predict how long weather conditions over an air might remain stable enough for the region to be under a pollution warning.

Holworth and McCormick feel the advisory are helping make the man in the street aware of air pollution problems. But the center has no control over whether its advisories are needed at the local level.

And said Holworth, "there is little the individual could do anyway. It would be up to community leaders whether to take action." Local authorities in an area under a pollution warning could act to reduce the hazard, he suggested, by having industries shut down or change to a different type of fuel which might cause fewer problems.

Farley Granger Returns To Hollywood for Films

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I left Hollywood because I didn't know my craft," says Farley Granger. "I was a star, but I knew nothing of the techniques of acting. I figured I'd better learn, or I'd be in trouble when the star aspects of my career wore off."

Granger has returned to a Hollywood career after a 13-year absence. He admits to being 41, but it's hard to believe. He still has the lean, boyish look — "Tennis and calisthenics help" — that thrilled female hearts in the postwar period.

His last movie here was "The Girl in the Red Velvet Swing" in 1955. He has returned for television shows and in repertory with Eva RieGallienne's company, but his home remained in New York.

"Now I'm ready to settle down here again," he said. "There are some television shows in the wind, and a couple of movies, too. I think I can handle whatever comes."

He wasn't always so confident. As a North Hollywood high school student in 1943, he had

Granger engaged in a madcap romance with Shelley Winters which managed to reap a lot of mileage in the gossip columns and fan magazines. It also resulted in a comedy which costarred the pair — "Behave Yourself."

Said Farley: "The only trouble with that picture was that it wasn't funny."

Indeed he took a dim view of most of his films, and the view grew dimmer as he matured. In 1953 he decided it was time to make the break, even though picture offers were still coming.

The actor's return to the Hollywood scene will be signaled by his costarring with Julie Harris in the opening drama of NBC's Bob Hope Chrysler Theater on Sept. 14.

Dear Abby: Son Should See Legal Officer

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son, who just turned 21, recently came home from two years in Germany with the army. He had some pictures of a 17-year-old German girl. He thought she was "pretty." (I thought she was fat.) Well, soon after he got home he got this letter from her written in German, which nobody around here can read, so how was he to know she was telling him she was P. G.?

He didn't find this out until yesterday when he got a letter from her which she had a friend write in English. What is he suppose to do about this? He said they were close, but not THAT close. Please help me. I have no husband.

SOLIDER'S MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: If your son is still in the army, he should talk to the legal officer in his outfit. If he can prove that he wasn't THAT close, or that others were equally "close" he could be absolved of all responsibility for the girl's condition. But if he is responsible, the laws are the same over there as they are here, and he may have to support the child. If your son is out of the army, he will need a civilian lawyer. Preferably one who is versed in international law.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think parents should accept collect calls from their children who work in other states and can well afford to pay for their own calls? These children are too lazy to write letters so they call us collect because they know we love to hear from them. It is really hardship on us to pay for all their calls. We would like your advice.

ANONYMOUS
DEAR ANONYMOUS: Remember the old days, when you "trained" your children? Well, now they're training you! Shift gears, back up, and start training them again. When the telephone operators asks if you will accept the charges, say, "NO!"

DEAR ABBY: I have one daughter-in-law who insists on calling me "grandma." Now I do not object to having my grandchildren call me "grandma", but I certainly do not care to be called "grandma" by a woman who could not possibly be a granddaughter of mine.

If she doesn't wish to call me "mom" or "mother" as my other daughters-in-law call me, she may call me by my first name, or anything else that she likes. But I do wish she would quit that "grandma" business. How do I make this plain to her?

FURIOUS
DEAR FURIOUS: How about telling her? She probably isn't aware you are furious.

Views on Television — Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Leigh Taylor-Young, television's Cinderella girl of the 1966-67 season, has been an official member of ABC's "Peyton Place" cast for only six days — and already they have put her in a hospital gown and got her practicing operating a wheelchair.

That's the way things are in "Peyton Place," where life is a twice-a-week cycle of illness, emotional crisis, birth and sometimes death.

Miss Taylor-Young, 21, despite some anxiety about the confusion around her, appears to be handling her sudden exposure to limelight with mature calm.

A tall slender beauty with long, straight hair the color of blonde mahogany, and large green eyes in a heart-shaped face, this Birmingham, Mich., girl has been chosen to fill the pot — but not the character — vacated by Mia Farrow.

There is a theory, widely advanced by television's educated second-guessers, that one of the bases of "Peyton Place" popularity has been curiosity about the identity of the young man who would sweep Allison Mackenzie off her feet.

ers' curiosity. Producer Paul Monash frowns on comparisons between the two girls, but there is undoubtedly similarity, including a fawn-like shyness.

Leigh's British-type hyphenated name is her own idea and combines her real family name, Taylor, with that of her stepfather who encouraged her theatrical ambitions.

After Birmingham High School, she attended Northwestern University for a time, quitting to go to New York and study with famed acting teacher Sandy Meisner. This, plus determined job-hunting, led to a small part in the short-lived "Three Bags Full" followed by a sort of vacation trip to Palm Springs.

"My agent thought it would be good after a bout with pneumonia — and that I might meet some important people," she said.

She did: Paul Monash, who was looking for a new girl in town. Leigh tested for the role and was signed in June — a well-kept secret.

She will be introduced into the series sometime in late September or early October. All "Peyton Place" story lines are guarded like allied invasion plans, but she will start out with only a first name — "Rachel" — and, to quote Monash, "enter in a dramatic fashion." "She is more primitive than innocent," he said, mysteriously. "She comes from a deprived and peculiar environment."

Dear Abby: Son Should See Legal Officer

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son, who just turned 21, recently came home from two years in Germany with the army. He had some pictures of a 17-year-old German girl. He thought she was "pretty." (I thought she was fat.) Well, soon after he got home he got this letter from her written in German, which nobody around here can read, so how was he to know she was telling him she was P. G.?

He didn't find this out until yesterday when he got a letter from her which she had a friend write in English. What is he suppose to do about this? He said they were close, but not THAT close. Please help me, I have no husband.

SOLIDER'S MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: If your son is still in the army, he should talk to the legal officer in his outfit. If he can prove that the wasn't THAT close, or that others were equally "close" he could be absolved of all responsibility for the girl's condition.

But if he is responsible, the laws are the same over there as they are here, and he may have to support the child. If your son is out of the army, he will need a civilian lawyer. Preferably one who is versed in international law.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think parents should accept collect calls from their children who work in other states and can well afford to pay for their own calls? These children are too lazy to write letters so they call us collect because they know we love to hear from them. It is really hardship on us to pay for all their calls. We would like your advice.

ANONYMOUS
DEAR ANONYMOUS: Remember the old days, when you "trained" your children? Well, now they're training you! Shift gears, back up, and start training them again. When the telephone operators asks if you will accept the charges, say, "NO!"

DEAR ABBY: I have one daughter-in-law who insists on calling me "grandma." Now I do not object to having my grandchildren call me "grandma" but I certainly do not care to be called "grandma" by a woman who could not possibly be a granddaughter of mine.

If she doesn't wish to call me "mom" or "mother" as my other daughters-in-law call me, she may call me by my first name, or anything else that she likes. But I do wish she would quit that "grandma" business. How do I make this plain to her?

FURIOUS
DEAR FURIOUS: How about telling her? She probably isn't aware you are furious.

Views on Television — Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Leigh Taylor-Young, television's Cinderella girl of the 1966-67 season, has been an official member of ABC's "Peyton Place" cast for only six days — and already they have put her in a hospital gown and got her practicing operating a wheelchair.

That's the way things are in "Peyton Place," where life is a twice-a-week cycle of illness, emotional crisis, birth and sometimes death.

Miss Taylor-Young, 21, despite some anxiety about the confusion around her, appears to be handling her sudden exposure to limelight with mature calm.

A tall slender beauty with long, straight hair the color of blonde mahogany, and large green eyes in a heart-shaped face, this Birmingham, Mich., girl has been chosen to fill the pot — but not the character — vacated by Mia Farrow.

There is a theory, widely advanced by television's educated second-guessers, that one of the bases of "Peyton Place" popularity has been curiosity about the identity of the young man who would sweep Allison Mackenzie off her feet.

ers' curiosity. Producer Paul Monash frowns on comparisons between the two girls, but there is undoubtedly similarity, including a fawn-like shyness.

Leigh's British-type hyphenated name is her own idea and combines her real family name, Taylor, with that of her stepfather who encouraged her theatrical ambitions.

After Birmingham High School, she attended Northwestern University for a time, quitting to go to New York and study with famed acting teacher Sandy Meisner. This, plus determined job-hunting, led to a small part in the short-lived "Three Bags Full" followed by a sort of vacation trip to Palm Springs.

"My agent thought it would be good after a bout with pneumonia — and that I might meet some important people," she said.

She did: Paul Monash, who was looking for a new girl in town. Leigh tested for the role and was signed in June — a well-kept secret.

She will be introduced into the series sometime in late September or early October. All "Peyton Place" story lines are guarded like allied invasion plans, but she will start out with only a first name — "Rachel" — and, to quote Monash, "enter in a dramatic fashion."

"She is more primitive than innocent," he said, mysteriously. "She comes from a deprived and peculiar environment."

Long Reunion Attended by 73 Persons

The 47th annual reunion of James M. Long family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Adams of near Johnstown, with 73 persons present.

A short business meeting was held in the afternoon. Officers elected were: Dwight Reid, president; Paul Long, vice president; Jean King, secretary; Johnnie Brigner, treasurer; Laura Long, historian and corresponding secretary.

The oldest persons present were Harry Junk, 74. The youngest was Patty Parker, 2, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Parker, Worthington.

Games and contests were enjoyed. Ice cream and cake were served late in the afternoon.

Next year's reunion will be held the second Sunday in August at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Anderson.

ics To Continue Study Women's Use of 'Pill'

NGTON (AP) — A very infrequent but serious side effect, but said that it found "no adequate scientific data, at this time, proving these compounds unsafe for human use."

The Food and Drug Administration appointed the 10-member committee last year and FDA Commissioner James L. Goddard said steps are planned or already have been taken to implement its recommendations.

The recommendations include a requirement that all oral contraceptives be uniformly labeled with warnings of possible serious side effects, and elimination of restrictions on the length of time women may take the pills regularly.

Goddard also announced expansion of some present studies of possible adverse effects and said other studies are being planned.

At a briefing for newsmen, doctors said it would take at least 10 years to determine whether there is a relationship between the pills and the development of cancer, and an unknown number of years to determine whether use of the pills induces development of diabetes.

The doctors said the pills are regarded as 99 per cent effective in preventing conception.

The committee, after saying in its 21-page report that it found no adequate scientific data at this time to prove the pills unsafe, added:

"It has nevertheless taken full cognizance of certain very infrequent but serious side effects suggested by animal experimental data and by some of the and of possible theoretic risks metabolic changes in human beings.

"In the final analysis, each physician must evaluate the advantages and the risks this method of contraception in comparison with other available methods or with no contraception at all. He can do this wisely only when there is presented to him dispassionate scientific knowledge of the available data."

It was brought out the manufacturers of the drugs have had 110 deaths reported to them which allegedly could have been associated with taking of the oral contraceptives.

But the committee emphasized that the conditions which caused the deaths also occur normally in women who have never had the pills.

Township Police Training Is OK'd

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe ruled Tuesday that a township may pay the expenses of police officers during basic police training required by Ohio law.

The costs to be reimbursed would include travel expenses, Saxbe said, and at the discretion of the board, may be paid in advance.

The attorney general pointed out that all Ohio police officers are now required to complete 120 hours of basic training before they can receive a permanent appointment.

Arkansas 'Monkey Law' Under Assault

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—One day when Susan Epperson, an attractive young biology teacher, stepped into a public school classroom, she says she lost part of her freedom of speech.

She wants it back. As a result, she has become the vanguard of the Arkansas Education Association's legal assault on the state's 38-year-old law banning the teaching of Darwin's theory of evolution—one of the nation's last three "monkey laws."

"We just decided it was time for the law to go," says Forrest Rozzell, head of the association. "It is an unwarranted affront to the ability and integrity of teachers."

Mrs. Epperson, 24, completing her third year on the faculty at Little Rock Central High School, became the association's champion in the courtroom this year.

She filed a suit to declare the law unconstitutional. And she won Round 1.

Murray Red, a Chancery Court judge, one step below the Arkansas Supreme Court, held in May that the law must go because it tends to restrain the quest for knowledge by banning a theory that poses no hazard to the community.

The state is appealing to the Arkansas Supreme Court. It has pledged to fight to the U.S. Supreme Court, and Mrs. Epperson's attorneys say they will carry the battle as far as necessary to eliminate the law.

Essentially the questions are: What limits may be placed on freedom of speech in public schools? Is the law a "reasonable" exercise of the people's rights to regulate public schools?

Outgoing Gov. Orval E. Faubus likes the law as a means of keeping "way out" teachers in line. Republican gubernatorial candidate Winthrop Rockefeller sides with the teachers' association.

Baptist minister, in convention resolutions, have pointedly affirmed their faith in the Bible story of creation. Presbyterians, no less faithful to the Bible story, nevertheless called for an end to the law.

The U.S. Supreme Court has dealt with innumerable cases involving specific restraints on freedom of speech but it has not established a broadly applicable definition of legally reasonable restraints.

"The court has held that such a definition is not possible in any specific, precise terms," said Eugene Warren, attorney for the teachers association.

But lawyers on both sides of the issue believe this case is close to the center of the problem of defining a reasonable restraint — the area where the legal waters are murky.

In his decision, Reed said the freedom to teach and freedom to learn must be unrestrained except when they involve a doctrine hazardous to a community.

He decided that the evolution theory was not so dangerous. The freedom-of-speech question rests on the first amendment, which prevents Congress from "abridging the freedom of speech." The Supreme Court has held that this applies as well to the estates.

At the same time, the court has made it plain that freedom of speech is neither absolute nor totally unrestrained.

For example, in 1927 the Supreme Court held that "the teaching of what is immoral or inimical to the public welfare may be forbidden by the state, even though taught as a moral or religious duty."

Arkansas Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett argues that the Darwinian theory of evolution — like polygamy — is inimical to the public welfare.

"Will our children be 'free' to choose their religion after their minds have been warped by antireligious propaganda; or will they be forever captives of the Darwinian theory, foisted upon them in their youth?" he asks. Bennett emphasized that some restraints on freedom of speech have been held legal — including the Hatch Act, which forbids federal employees from active participation in partisan politics.

Similarly, he said, Mrs. Epperson is subject to restraint by the evolution law because she was a state employee, hired by a state subdivision — the Little Rock School Board — and paid with state funds.

Mrs. Epperson's personal view is that a reasonable restraint would not conflict with academic freedom.

The language of the Arkansas anti-evolution law made it illegal to teach or use a textbook that taught that man developed from a lower order of animals. The penalty was a fine up to $500 and dismissal from the teaching post.

The Arkansas Education Association contends that a strict interpretation of the law would clear the classrooms of encyclopedias, most biology textbooks and even dictionaries.

The legislature board considered an anti-evolution law in 1927. "Monkey business," lawmakers snorted and refused to adopt it.

Then the Rev. Ben Bogard, a Baptist minister, founded the American Anti-Evolution Association, and petitions signed by 19,000 voters put the issue on the 1928 general election ballot.

On Nov. 6, 1928, Arkansas adopted the law by a vote of 1,991 to 63,406.

It went on the books then — largely to be ignored — and apparently no one has ever been convicted under it.

Fairfield Polls Get New Names

Fairfield County's Board of Elections has announced that 35 voting precincts within the neighboring county have been changed and will be effective for the November election.

Voting places have not been changed, the board emphasized. Only their names have been changed for the benefit of election workers.

The new system changes all township precinct designations to A, B, C, D, or E following the name of the township. For example, a board spokesman noted, the following changes have been made.

signated as Amanda-B and Roy-alton precinct has been changed to Amanda-A precinct.

Greencastle precinct becomes Bloom Twp. C; Lithopolis becomes Bloom Twp. A; Oakland becomes Clearcreek B; Stoutsville becomes Clearcreek C; Clarksburg becomes Hocking C; North Hocking becomes Hocking B.

Fairfield Polls Get New Names

Fairfield County's Board of Elections has announced that 35 voting precincts within the neighboring county have been changed and will be effective for the November election.

Voting places have not been changed, the board emphasized. Only their names have been changed for the benefit of election workers.

The new system changes all township precinct designations to A, B, C, D, or E following the name of the township. For example, a board spokesman noted, the following changes have been made.

Amanda precinct will be designed as Amanda-B and Roy-alton precinct has been changed to Amanda-A precinct.

Greencastle precinct becomes Bloom Twp. C; Lithopolis becomes Bloom Twp. A; Oakland becomes Clearcreek B; Stoutsville becomes Clearcreek C; Clarksburg becomes Hocking C; North Hocking becomes Hocking B.

Viet Pilot's Best Friend: SOS Beeper

Ohio Man Is Going on 82, Still Working on Railroads

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of a pilot's best friends in Viet Nam may be an electronic gadget the size of two cigarette packs — a pulsating device that beams an automatic SOS in case of trouble.

This is the emergency radio beacon, a $75 device that automatically begins sending a distress signal if a pilot is forced to parachute from his plane.

It goes to work whether the airman is conscious or not.

The beacon continues emitting its signal at 243 megacycles — the international distress frequency — until the pilots shut it off upon landing. He might find this desirable to avoid leading enemy troops to his location.

The one-pound, battery-powered beacon is one of two key electronic items among the pilot's survival gear.

The other is a 2½ pound "transistorized miniature transceiver" — two-way radio — with which he can communicate by voice with rescue aircraft. An airman carries the $150 radio in his flight suit on combat missions.

During the Korean war airmen were outfitted with the two-way radio, but Pentagon officials say the automatic beacon is something new. Its ultra high frequency alarm carries 80 miles while an airman floats to earth. Upon landing this range is reduced somewhat by terrain and jungle.

The voice radio has about a 50-mile range.

Over 200 Air Force and Navy pilots have been rescued after going down over North or South Viet Nam, and Pentagon spokesmen credit the electronic gear with aiding recovery operations.

There seems to be some concern, however, that the enemy might be able to lure rescue craft into an antiaircraft fire trap by beaming a decoy signal. This could be done by using ultra high frequency equipment or the survival pack taken from a dead or captured American flier.

One former pilot, however, downgrades the likelihood of such an enemy tactic.

The very use of a decoy signal necessarily means that the Communists would give away their position, he said. Besides, rescue planes are accompanied by heavily armed aircraft to defend them.

FRANKLIN, Ohio (AP) — George Arend is going on 82, but he's still working on railroads.

Forced to retire from his conductor's job in 1957, Arend set up his own station on a Franklin Hilltop with a Silverton coach for a home. He builds model trains there for museums.

"It used to be that a man could work as long as he could pass the physical," Arend said. "The company changed that and a man has to retire when he reached 70-years-of-age."

Trim and straight in his conductor's uniform, Arend told he started working on the old Northern Railroad in 1900. "I've worked at everything from a clerk to a station manager and auditor."

Many of the 57 years with the railroads were spent in the west at mining towns and summer resorts.

"One winter was especially bad," he said. "Snow started falling in December and the tracks were blocked up all through winter until April. We had to take a bulldozer and push the snow off the track it was so deep."

His last run was on the Denver and Rio Grande line. But he didn't settle down on a rocking chair to retire.

"I had lived in coaches while I was working", Arend said. "Then I had the opportunity to buy this one for myself."

It made a comfortable four-room home with a kitchen, living room, bedroom and library furnished with a pullman berth and chairs. A railroad crossing sign marks the sidewalk and other signs point out public phones and telegraph.

Arend's model trains are now on display in railroad museums and in the homes of friends. A four and a-half foot long coach has been completed this year for the Cass Museum at Cass, W.Va., and another for friends in Colorado.

Listed among railroads "whos who," Arend told how people and things have changed in the half century — plus he worked for the railroads.

"The worst thing about things changing is that we change right along with them," Arend said. "But I'm not ready to give up yet. The company may think I'm too old to work, but I am going to live to be 100 years old. My dad made it to 99 before he died and I believe I'll reach 100."

Swedish Student Tells Experiences While Visiting Red Chinese Family

EDITOR'S NOTE: Per Kronvall, 19, a Swedish student and budding journalist, visited a Chinese home in Peking during a recently concluded visit to Communist China and in the following story, written for The Associated Press, he reports on the experience.

By PER KRONVALL
Written For The Associated Press

In Peking I visited the family of a student. The father worked in a steel mill outside the city. He was a skilled worker and earned 90 yuan—almost $40—a month, about 20 yuan a month more than the average worker.

U.S. Personal Income Climbs During July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal income during July climbed to another record despite the airline machinists strike and a shutdown of automobile plants for their annual model changeovers, the Commerce Department reports.

The $2.5 billion rise boosted personal income to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $579.7 billion during the month.

An increase of $2.8 billion in wages and salaries more than offset decreases in some other areas, the department added.

One limiting factor was the start of the medicare program on July 1. Persons who enrolled in the supplementary insurance program started paying $3 a month to help them finance doctor and drug bills. That increased contributions for social insurance by about $500 million, which the department said is counted as a reduction in personal income.

Partly offsetting this were increased benefits under the health care program for the elderly which the department estimated boosted personal income by $100 million.

Personal income resulting from wages and salaries, proprietors' income and property income was up $2.7 billion during July, about the same as the average gain during the past years.

The July gain in wages and salaries centered in distribution, services and government, with a pay raise for federal civilian employees and military personnel helping to swell the total. Total wage and salary income during July was at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $392.3 billion.

Manufacturing wages and salaries at $127.1 billion, seasonally adjusted at an annual rate, were up only slightly from June. Sizable increases in metals and machinery were offset by decreases in transportation equipment as automobile plants closed earlier than usual for model changeovers.

Other durable goods industries showed little change, the department said.

Mentally Retarded Rule Hearing Booked

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A public hearing to consider newly revised rules, regulations and standards for establishment and operation of programs and training for the state's mentally retarded has been set for Sept. 14, it was announced Tuesday.

Dr. J. Wylie McGough, commissioner of the Division of Mental Hygiene, said the hearing would be held in the State Office Building on Front Street at 10:30 a.m. EST.

His rent, for a two-room ground-floor apartment in a privately owned house, was seven yuan a month. The father, his wife and another son all worked and had lunches and dinners at their places of employment, with the father and the son paying 16 yuan a month each and the mother 15. The girl of the family, 15 years old, attended school, where she had free meals. Bus fares totaled 20 yuan a month for the family.

I asked the man of the house through his English-speaking son, what he thought of his life. "Everything is good," he replied. "I lead a happy life. I can support my family. We have enough to eat every day."

"What did you do before the liberation?" I asked.

"My father worked as a boy, and I also tried to be a servant, but it didn't go so well. The family that my father and I worked for was very kind, even though they were imperialists. They got me a job as a tram conductor. My family was not starving, as many others were. Then the war came, and the Japanese occupied China. Then times became even more difficult, and many people starved to death. It was during the Japanese occupation that I started to work in the steel industry."

"Do you have any hobbies?" I asked.

"Not really," he replied. "In the summer I often sit and play cards with my neighbors. We often go to the movies together. Then, of course, the production teams make a lot of arrangements."

"Like what?" I asked. "It's very good. They make arrangements to have my hair cut in the factory. They also arrange for me to go to a bathhouse. And you don't have to pay anything."

Then I turned to the son, who was 18 years old and worked in his father's trade. Because he was just learning he received only 30 yuan a month.

"What are your future plans?" I asked.

"I want to be a skilled worker like my father, and perhaps I will be chosen for a responsible position in the factory."

"Will you get any extra money for this kind of job?" I asked.

"No, why should I? It is a privilege to work as a leader."

"Do all the people think that it is good to do much extra work and get no reward?" I asked.

"Yes, There are some who say no, but it is only because they read too little of the works of Mao Tse-tung."

While I was talking to the young man, the father started to read his pocket edition of Mao's works. I don't know if this act was to show me his admiration for Mao or what.

I asked the mother, who was a nurse in one of the Peking hospitals, about the prices of consumer goods. She let me know that food products like rice, tea and meat were only sold to those who had food coupons. One also needed coupons to buy cotton goods. Vegetables were quite inexpensive. A kilo of rice—2.2 pounds—cost 20 jin or 10 cents. Clothes were costly. A pair of simple blue pants cost 4.60 yuan. A summer shirt cost just as much. Winter clothes were even more expensive. And such things as nylon shirts cost 17 yuan, about one-fifth of the average monthly salary. But in China, she told me, salaries never went up; prices came down. I asked if there was any product that had gone up in price. The only price increase she mentioned was bread.

"What kind of social benefits do you have?" I asked.

"Well," the father responded, "I and my second son have full medical aid insurance; so does my wife, because we all work.

But my two other children who must undergo an expensive operation the union helps him so are still studying, get only 50 per cent protection. But if one that one only needs to pay about 15 yuan. For example, when our neighbor's boy fell and broke two of his side teeth he had to go to the dentist many times. His parents paid about nine yuan. Before the liberation the poor working people never could afford to go to dentists or doctors."

The girl wore a red scarf around her neck which I could tell made her a member of the Pioneers (a Communist youth organization). She told me about different activities she had. Before, she used to go out during vacation to work in state farms but now she had a lot of different meetings to attend. "What kind of meetings?" I asked.

"We sit and listen to how our instructors tell about our country's revolutionary history. And we also read Mao Tse-tung's works," she said proudly.

"Think of it," the father said. "Thanks to the revolution and Chairman Mao, my children have a future. We are happy and never had it so good. I even have a bicycle, although I don't really need one. If someone would have told me that my life would be so pleasant before the liberation, I would have laughed."

Swedish Student Tells Experiences While Visiting Red Chinese Family

EDITOR'S NOTE: Per Kronvall, 19, a Swedish student and budding journalist, visited a Chinese home in Peking during a recently concluded visit to Communist China and in the following story, written for The Associated Press, he reports on the experience.

By PER KRONVALL
Written For The Associated Press

In Peking I visited the family of a student. The father worked in a steel mill outside the city. He was a skilled worker and earned 90 yuan—almost $40—a month, about 20 yuan a month more than the average worker.

U.S. Personal Income Climbs During July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal income during July climbed to another record despite the airline machinists strike and a shutdown of automobile plants for their annual model changeovers, the Commerce Department reports.

The $2.5 billion rise boosted personal income to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $579.7 billion during the month.

An increase of $2.8 billion in wages and salaries more than offset decreases in some other areas, the department added.

One limiting factor was the start of the medicare program on July 1. Persons who enrolled in the supplementary insurance program started paying $3 a month to help them finance doctor and drug bills. That increased contributions for social insurance by about $500 million, which the department said is counted as a reduction in personal income.

Partly offsetting this were increased benefits under the health care program for the elderly which the department estimated boosted personal income by $100 million.

Personal income resulting from wages and salaries, proprietors' income and property income was up $2.7 billion during July, about the same as the average gain during the past years.

The July gain in wages and salaries centered in distribution, services and government, with a pay raise for federal civilian employees and military personnel helping to swell the total.

Total wage and salary income during July was at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $393.3 billion.

Manufacturing wages and salaries at $127.1 billion, seasonally adjusted at an annual rate, were up only slightly from June. Sizable increases in metals and machinery were offset by decreases in transportation equipment as automobile plants closed earlier than usual for model changeovers.

Other durable goods industries showed little change, the department said.

Mentally Retarded Rule Hearing Booked

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A public hearing to consider newly revised rules, regulations and standards for establishment and operation of programs and training for the state's mentally retarded has been set for Sept. 14, it was announced Tuesday.

Dr. J. Wylie McGough, commissioner of the Division of Mental Hygiene, said the hearing would be held in the State Office Building on Front Street at 10:30 a.m. EST.

His rent, for a two-room ground-floor apartment in a privately owned house, was seven yuan a month. The father, his wife and another son all worked and had lunches and dinners at their places of employment, with the father and the son paying 16 yuan a month each and the mother 15. The girl of the family, 15 years old, attended school, where she had free meals. Bus fares totaled 20 yuan a month for the family.

I asked the man of the house through his English-studying son, what he thought of his life.

"Everything is good," he replied. "I lead a happy life. I can support my family. We have enough to eat every day."

"What did you do before the liberation?" I asked.

"My father worked as a boy, and I also tried to be a servant, but it didn't go so well. The family that my father and I worked for was very kind, even though they were imperialists. They got me a job as a tram conductor. My family was not starving, as many others were. Then the war came, and the Japanese occupied China. Then times became even more difficult, and many people starved to death. It was during the Japanese occupation that I started to work in the steel industry."

"Do you have any hobbies?" I asked.

"Not really," he replied. "In the summer I often sit and play cards with my neighbors. We often go to the movies together. Then, of course, the production teams make a lot of arrangements."

"Like what?" I asked.

"It's very good. They make arrangements to have my hair cut in the factory. They also arrange for me to go to a bathhouse. And you don't have to pay anything."

Then I turned to the son, who was 18 years old and worked in his father's trade. Because he was just learning he received only 30 yuan a month.

"What are your future plans?" I asked.

"I want to be a skilled worker like my father, and perhaps I will be chosen for a responsible position in the factory."

"Will you get any extra money for this kind of job?" I asked.

"No, why should I? It is a privilege to work as a leader." "Do all the people think that it is good to do much extra work and get no reward?" I asked.

"Yes. There are some who say no, but it is only because they read too little of the works of Mao Tse-tung."

While I was talking to the young man, the father started to read his pocket edition of Mao's works. I don't know if this act was to show me his admiration for Mao or what.

I asked the mother, who was a nurse in one of the Peking hospitals, about the prices of consumer goods. She let me know that food products like rice, tea and meat were only sold to those who had food coupons. One also needed coupons to buy cotton goods. Vegetables were quite inexpensive. A kilo of rice—2.2 pounds—cost 20 jin or 10 cents. Clothes were costly. A pair of simple blue pants cost 4.60 yuan. A summer shirt cost just as much. Winter clothes were even more expensive. And such things as nylon shirts cost 17 yuan, about one-fifth of the average monthly salary. But in China, she told me, salaries never went up; prices came down. I asked if there was any product that had gone up in price. The only price increase she mentioned was bread.

"What kind of social benefits do you have?" I asked.

"Well," the father responded, "I and my second son have full medical aid insurance; so does my wife, because we all work."

But my two other children who must undergo an expensive operation the union helps him so per cent protection. But if one that one only needs to pay about 15 yuan. For example, when our neighbor's boy fell and broke two of his side teeth he had to go to the dentist many times. His parents paid about nine yuan. Before the liberation the poor working people never could afford to go to dentists or doctors."

The girl wore a red scarf around her neck which I could tell made her a member of the Pioneers (a Communist youth organization). She told me about different activities she had. Before, she used to go out during vacation to work in state farms but now she had a lot of different meetings to attend.

"What kind of meetings?" I asked.

"We sit and listen to how our instructors tell about our country's revolutionary history. And we also read Mao Tse-tung's works," she said proudly.

"Think of it," the father said. "Thanks to the revolution and Chairman Mao, my children have a future. We are happy and never had it so good. I even have a bicycle, although I don't really need one. If someone would have told me that my life would be so pleasant before the liberation, I would have laughed."

State Looking For New Plan On Finances

Revenue Service
Knocks Out Hope
For No-Tax Rule

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Municipalities and community improvement corporations are forging ahead with industrial development bond issues while the administration cases about for a new state plan in the wake of a federal tax exemption crackdown.

That's the way Development Director Fred Neuenschwander summed up Ohio's industrial financing picture Tuesday.

He said an Internal Revenue tax exemption on state and municipal bond issues involving a bond-trading profits called arbitrage would have "little if any effect" on local bond financing plans such as used in 30 states to attract industry.

But he explained that the Washington IRS stand knock out plans of the Ohio Development Financing Commission for a $100 million bond issue because it would be unmarketable without tax-free interest.

The commission will meet soon to consider alternatives, he added.

The IRS acted after an exasperated commission last week withdrew a tax-exemption request filed last spring.

Under arbitrage, the commission hoped to sell its bonds and simultaneously buy higher-yielding government securities to make a profit.

One method would have been purchase of $100 million worth of federal securities at a market price of $83 million to realize a $17 million profit by holding them to maturity and then paying off the state bond issue.

Earnings from the $17 million ultimately would have put the state in position to float another $100 million bond issue and repeat the process.

"The IRS stand has an effect on municipal or community improvement corporation (CIC) bonds if they don't attempt to reinvest proceeds," Neuenschwander asserted.

He added that three Portsmouth banks have agreed to buy a $400,000 industrial revenue bond issue of the Scioto County CIC and that upwards of 50 of the 168 CIC organizations in the state plan bond sales within a month.

"These bond sales will be the crux of the Ohio development program," Neuenschwander said.

"If IRS knocks out tax exemption for municipal or CIC industrial financing bonds for all states, then every one will be in the same boat. But we have so many things going for us that we are in good shape competitively. We want most of the work done at the local level."

Knocked out by the IRS were two sections of the state development program.

One would have enabled the commission to make a direct, low-interest loan up to half the cost of a project to a new or expanding industry.

The other would have allowed the commission to guarantee up to 90 per cent of the cost of an industrial project for which local financing was obtained.

Gilligan, Taft Using Computers in Campaign

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Computers are playing key roles in a congressional contest between a supporter of President Johnson and Republican Robert Taft Jr.

Both U.S. Rep. John J. Gilligan and Taft are using computers to help locate their strong and weak points in the 1st Congressional District, which covers half of Cincinnati and ranges from pockets of poor to swank suburbs.

Each man claims to be the underdog.

"No one with the Taft name running in this community can be the underdog," says Gilligan's campaign director.

"Bob's the underdog," says

Taft's campaign manager, Cal Rubin, has 1,000 or more volunteers for house-to-house canvassing to gather more data for the computer.

Gilligan's computer operation is similar.

"We have had a computerized list of all the registered voters in the district for some time," says his campaign manager, John G. Ruppenhoff.

Gilligan expects to use more than 2,000 volunteer campaign workers, nearly three times the number he used two years ago in defeating Republican Carl Rich.

Democrats are maintaining a close study of 161 key precincts where they hope to get 75 to 80 per cent of the votes.

Gilligan, a graduate of Notre Dame with a master's degree from the University of Cincinnati, was a literature instructor at Xavier University until 1953, when he won the first of six straight terms on the City Council.

He failed to win Democratic nomination for Ohio congressman-at-large in 1962 but two years later was nominated in the 1st District and became the third Democrat in 105 years to win the seat.

Taft, son of the late Robert A. Taft and grandson of President William Howard Taft, was elected to the Ohio House in 1955. He was its majority leader in 1962 when he was elected congressman-at-large.

Two years ago he ran for his father's old seat in the U.S. Senate against incumbent Democrat Sen. Stephen Young. Taft lost by 16,000 votes in a major upset.

Hocking Scenic Wonderland Is at Its Best in Autumn

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of tours of Ohio featuring the state's lakes and parks prepared for readers of The Herald by the Columbus Auto Club.

Beautiful in every season of the year, the Hocking County "Scenic Wonderland" will be at its very best in autumn when leaves take on many hues.

At that time Route 56, which passes through Circleville and cuts across the "wonderland", will carry a heavy traffic of slowly moving vehicles. Many will stop at various picnic spots for lunch and hikes into the hills.

Hocking Hills State Park, in the Hocking State Forest, embraces 8,320 acres. Bounded by Routes 43, 664, 56 and 180, it has Circleville, Logan and Athens as its gateways. Lake Logan is in the area, and offers fishing, boating and swimming.

Within its confines, Hocking Park has the widest variety of trees and plants to be found in Ohio. Approximately 100 kinds of birds are known to nest here, half of them remaining for the winter.

Top attractions of the area include:

Ash Cave, 80 acres on Ohio 56, a semi-circular recess in a large rock with a stream falling from the edge of the rock to a pool below.

Cantwell Cliffs, 386 acres of Ohio 374, featuring impressive cliffs with a deep rugged glen.

Conkle's Hollow, 57 acres on Ohio 374, a rugged area containing a deep picturesque glen the valley ending in a small cave and waterfall.

Old Man's Cave, 417 acres on Ohio 664, with two miles of heavily wooded gorge, waterfalls, two caves, and interesting rock formations.

Rock House, 165 acres on Ohio 374, where the distinctive feature is a rock house in the face of a perpendicular cliff.

This routing is suggested: Ohio Route 56, southeast, into tour area.

FREEZER 9 HOURS—April Hill, 4, gives a warm hug to the coolest cat in Austin, Tex. The kitty, now called Frosty, hopped from the freezer when April's mother, Mrs. Jerry Hill, opened it nine hours after putting in some fish. Frostbitten tail was all.

THE "WHY" OF OBESITY

Q. I know I am overweight—but why? Everytime I eat seems to turn to fat.

A. Almost everyone has an answer to this "why" question — except doctors who work in the field of nutrition. The appetite-calorie relationship in most people is a delicately balanced mechanism. Normally, the total body-fat mass changes only a few percentage points per year. In other words, caloric intake and caloric output match each other with remarkable accuracy. This is true with or without scales, diet, extra exercise or advice to put on or take off weight given by well-meaning friends. The experts would like to know what whets the appetite for more calories in a person whose storage depot of fat is already five or ten times that of the average or normal person. However, the experts have not yet found the answer.

EYE BAGS

Q. Do bags under the eyes indicate kidney trouble?

A. Not always. In some cases "bags" are caused by excess water seeping into the under-eye tissue during sleep and are of no significance. Some families seem to have a tendency to develop this sort of eye puffiness, and aging doesn't help matters. But certain kidney disorders can also cause "bags" under the eyes, so it's best to see your doctor and let him rule out any serious trouble.

We maintain full supplies of all drugs, including the newest "miracles," to be able to serve your every prescription need with maximum promptness and care.

State Looking For New Plan On Finances

Revenue Service
Knocks Out Hope
For No-Tax Rule

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Municipalities and community improvement corporations are forging ahead with industrial development bond issues while the administration cases about for a new state plan in the wake of a federal tax exemption crackdown.

That's the way Development Director Fred Neuenschwander summed up Ohio's industrial financing picture Tuesday.

He said an Internal Revenue tax exemption on state and municipal bond issues involving a bond-trading profits called arbitrage would have "little if any effect" on local bond financing plans such as used in 30 states to attract industry.

But he explained that the Washington IRS stand knock out plans of the Ohio Development Financing Commission for a $100 million bond issue because it would be unmarketable without tax-free interest.

Gilligan, 45, is running on the record of his first term in Congress, a record that Taft, 49, calls a "rubber stamp" of President Johnson's proposals.

Their campaign, while confined mainly to statements and visits to Viet Nam so far, still may be the most elaborate ever put on for a congressional seat here.

The Taft forces have divided the district into 15 areas, marked in color on a map to indicate whether they are Republican, Democratic or "swing" sections.

Beautiful in every season of the year, the Hocking County "Scenic Wonderland" will be at its very best in autumn when leaves take on many hues.

At that time Route 56, which passes through Circleville and cuts across the "wonderland", will carry a heavy traffic of slowly moving vehicles. Many will stop at various picnic spots for lunch and hikes into the hills.

Hocking Hills State Park, in the Hocking State Forest, embraces 8,320 acres. Bounded by Routes 43, 664, 56 and 180, it has Circleville, Logan and Athens as its gateways. Lake Logan is in the area, and offers fishing, boating and swimming.

Within its confines, Hocking Park has the widest variety of trees and plants to be found in Ohio. Approximately 100 kinds of birds are known to nest here, half of them remaining for the winter.

Top attractions of the area include:

Ash Cave, 80 acres on Ohio 56, a semi-circular recess in a large rock with a stream falling from the edge of the rock to a pool below.

Cantwell Cliffs, 386 acres of Ohio 374, featuring impressive cliffs with a deep rugged glen. Conkle's Hollow, 57 acres on Ohio 374, a rugged area containing a deep picturesque glen the valley ending in a small cave and waterfall.

Old Man's Cave, 417 acres on Ohio 664, with two miles of heavily wooded gorge, waterfalls, two caves, and interesting rock formations.

Rock House, 165 acres on Ohio 374, where the distinctive feature is a rock house in the face of a perpendicular cliff.

This routing is suggested: Ohio Route 56, southeast, into tour area.

THE "WHY" OF OBESITY

Q. I know I am overweight—but why? Every-thing I eat seems to turn to fat.

A. Almost everyone has an answer to this "why" question — except doctors who work in the field of nutrition. The appetite-calorie relationship in most people is a delicately balanced mechanism. Normally, the total body-fat mass changes only a few percentage points per year. In other words, caloric intake and caloric output match each other with remarkable accuracy. This is true with or without scales, diet, extra exercise or advice to put on or take off weight given by well-meaning friends. The experts would like to know what whets the appetite for more calories in a person whose storage depot of fat is already five or ten times that of the average or normal person. However, the experts have not yet found the answer.

EYE BAGS

Q. Do bags under the eyes indicate kidney trouble?

A. Not always. In some cases "bags" are caused by excess water seeping into the under-eye tissue during sleep and are of no significance. Some families seem to have a tendency to develop this sort of eye puffiness, and aging doesn't help matters. But certain kidney disorders can also cause "bags" under the eyes, so it's best to see your doctor and let him rule out any serious trouble.

Stokes Asked To Provide Probe Data

CLEVELAND (AP) — U.S. Attorney Merle M. McCurdy, responding to State Rep. Carl B. Stokes' call for a federal grand jury investigation of last month's Hough riots, says Stokes should come see him if he has any pertinent information.

McCurdy issued a statement Tuesday suggesting that Stokes discuss the Hough Riots with him in person rather than "by correspondence and news release."

Stokes asked for the federal action last Friday after criticizing the Cuyahoga County Grand Jury report on the Hough riots as a "whitewash."

Informed of McCurdy's statement, Stokes said he was distressed that criticism of the county grand jury's findings by several groups and individuals "does not raise some question in McCurdy's mind as to whether the public interest has been served."

He said it was surprising also that cases of alleged police brutality arising from the riots "do not stir Mr. McCurdy in any responsibilities he may have for the protection of the civil rights and civil liberties of persons in this (Negro) community, with whom he has a close identification."

Both Stokes and McCurdy are Negro Democrats.

Ohioans Rap Reserve Call

Proposal Seen Weakening Guard

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A high-ranking Ohio National Guard officer disagrees with two U.S. Senators who want to put some Army reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty.

"The Reserve is just what the name implies," Brig Gen. Heber L. Minton, Ohio's assistant adjutant general for Army, said Tuesday. "Once Reserve troops are committed, they're committed. They're no longer in reserve," he added.

"Like (President) Teddy Roosevelt said, 'walk softly and carry a big stick.' The Reserve is our nation's big stick," said Minton.

"I don't think there is a national emergency now," he added.

Sens. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., have offered a rider to the defense appropriations bill would give the President authority to order reservists to active duty if they have had only training duty.

It would also allow the President to call up reservists without declaring a national emergency.

About three-quarters of Ohio's 15,000 Army National Guardsmen would be subject to callup under such authority, an aide in the adjutant general's office said.

Ohio Adjutant General Erwin Hostetler said he was opposed to the Russell-Saltonstall proposal in that it would allow individual guardsmen to be taken out of their units and put on active duty.

"This would weaken the whole structure of the National Guard," he said.

Governors Conference Slated in December

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP)—A special session of the National Governors Conference will be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 16 and 17. The announcement was made by Gov. William L. Guy of North Dakota, chairman of the conference.

Parts of China's crowded Yangtze Valley support 3,500 people to the square mile.

There Is No Sanctuary For Unarmed in Viet

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—There are no sanctuaries in South Viet Nam for unarmed civilians.

Almost daily, guerrilla warfare takes its toll of civilian lives. Civilians are not even safe in the streets of Saigon.

There are no statistics on civilian deaths, but they run into the thousands. More are likely to die.

Incidents last week, including the bombing of a Mekong River delta village by U.S. Air Force jets with the death of 26 villagers and injury to another 124, emphasize the plight of the innocent civilian caught between the Viet Cong and allied forces.

There have been other such bombings in which civilians were killed, unnoticed or unknown to the public. As one Vietnamese officer put it: "It happens all the time."

Last September, U.S. jets

dropped four bombs in the hamlet of Gia Linh in the southern portion of the demilitarized zone, and Vietnamese policemen reported that 20 persons were killed and 10 others wounded. Later, a military spokesman said the bombings were apparently the result of pilots incorrectly identifying their target.

The killing of civilians results from the way the war is conducted, the selection of weapons.

Allied forces sometimes appear to be less selective than the Viet Cong. The allies have airpower and artillery, while the Viet Cong have none.

Whereas the Viet Cong might select for assassination one or two key leaders of a government-controlled village, South Vietnamese troops might call an air strike on a village to cut down a Viet Cong platoon or two—30 to 60 men.

The bombing Aug. 9 of the delta village is an example.

The attack was ordered against the village of Truong

Thanh by Lt. Col. Le Cong Thuong, chief of Phuong Dinh province. It had been reported that 50 Viet Cong were in and around the village.

6col. Thuong called for an air strike. His request was relayed to American forces and sent to divisional Vietnamese and corps military levels for approvals, a procedure which must be followed. It was okayed.

The air strike posed the questions: Why so much firepower? Why didn't a company of South Vietnamese ground troops—perhaps 150 men—surround the 50 Viet Cong?

In some cases, civilians killed in military operations are simply listed as Viet Cong.

Other civilians have been caught in the middle of civil strife, such as at Da Nang last May when rebel Buddhist troops fought government troops in the streets. Many civilians were casualties, but there was no firm figure.

On the military side, within 48 hours of the bombing of Truong Thanh village last week, American jets mistakenly swooped down on the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Welcome in the South China Sea and attacked it, apparently in the belief it was a North Vietnamese torpedo boat. Two of the 13 men aboard, including the captain, were killed. All of the other 11 were wounded.

Civilians also face the perils of bombs accidentally released or a crippled airplane crashing into their towns.

On July 1, eight Vietnamese civilians—seven of them school children—were killed and 52 persons wounded when U.S. Air Force planes jettisoned their unused explosives.

Following normal practices, the jets moved in to jettison their ordnance in a section of the Dong Nai River north of Bien Hoa. As the pilot of the first plane released his second canister, he felt it hold for about a second, then fall away. One canister containing anti-personnel ordnance hit a two-room private elementary schoolhouse.

Ohioans Rap Reserve Call

Proposal Seen Weakening Guard

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A high-ranking Ohio National Guard officer disagrees with two U.S. Senators who want to put some Army reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty.

"The Reserve is just what the name implies," Brig. Gen. Heber L. Minton, Ohio's assistant adjutant general for Army, said Tuesday. "Once Reserve troops are committed, they're committed. They're no longer in reserve," he added.

"Like (President) Teddy Roosevelt said, 'walk softly and carry a big stick.' The Reserve is our nation's big stick," said Minton.

"I don't think there is a national emergency now," he added.

Sens. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., have offered a rider to the defense appropriations bill would give the President authority to order reservists to active duty if they have had only training duty.

It would also allow the President to call up reservists without declaring a national emergency.

About three-quarters of Ohio's 15,000 Army National Guardsmen would be subject to callup under such authority, an aide in the adjutant general's office said.

Ohio Adjutant General Erwin Hostetler said he was opposed to the Russell-Saltonstall proposal in that it would allow individual guardsmen to be taken out of their units and put on active duty.

"This would weaken the whole structure of the National Guard," he said.

Governors Conference Slated in December

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP)—A special session of the National Governors Conference will be held at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 16 and 17. The announcement was made by Gov. William L. Guy of North Dakota, chairman of the conference.

Parts of China's crowded Yangtze Valley support 3,500 people to the square mile.

There Is No Sanctuary For Unarmed in Viet

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—There are no sanctuaries in South Viet Nam for unarmed civilians.

Almost daily, guerrilla warfare takes its toll of civilian lives. Civilians are not even safe in the streets of Saigon.

There are no statistics on civilian deaths, but they run into the thousands. More are likely to die.

Incidents last week, including the bombing of a Mekong River delta village by U.S. Air Force jets with the death of 26 villagers and injury to another 124, emphasize the plight of the innocent civilian caught between the Viet Cong and allied forces.

There have been other such bombings in which civilians were killed, unnoticed or unknown to the public. As one Vietnamese officer put it: "It happens all the time."

Last September, U.S. jets

dropped four bombs in the hamlet of Gia Linh in the southern portion of the demilitarized zone, and Vietnamese policemen reported that 20 persons were killed and 10 others wounded. Later, a military spokesman said the bombings were apparently the result of pilots incorrectly identifying their target.

The killing of civilians results from the way the war is conducted, the selection of weapons.

Allied forces sometimes appear to be less selective than the Viet Cong. The allies have airpower and artillery, while the Viet Cong have none.

Whereas the Viet Cong might select for assassination one or two key leaders of a government-controlled village, South Vietnamese troops might call an air strike on a village to cut down a Viet Cong platoon or two—30 to 60 men.

The bombing Aug. 9 of the delta village is an example.

The attack was ordered against the village of Truong

Thanh by Lt. Col. Le Cong Thuong, chief of Phuong Dinh province. It had been reported that 50 Viet Cong were in and around the village.

6col. Thuong called for an air strike. His request was relayed to American forces and sent to divisional Vietnamese and corps military levels for approvals, a procedure which must be followed. It was okayed.

The air strike posed the questions: Why so much firepower? Why didn't a company of South Vietnamese ground troops—perhaps 150 men—surround the 50 Viet Cong?

In some cases, civilians killed in military operations are simply listed as Viet Cong. Other civilians have been caught in the middle of civil strife, such as at Da Nang last May when rebel Buddhist troops fought government troops in the streets. Many civilians were casualties, but there was no firm figure.

On the military side, within 48 hours of the bombing of Truong Thanh village last week, American jets mistakenly swooped down on the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Welcome in the South China Sea and attacked it, apparently in the belief it was a North Vietnamese torpedo boat. Two of the 13 men aboard, including the captain, were killed. All of the other 11 were wounded.

Civilians also face the perils of bombs accidentally released or a crippled airplane crashing into their towns.

On July 1, eight Vietnamese civilians—seven of them school children—were killed and 52 persons wounded when U.S. Air Force planes jettisoned their unused explosives.

Following normal practices, the jets moved in to jettison their ordnance in a section of the Dong Nai River north of Bien Hoa. As the pilot of the first plane released his second canister, he felt it hold for about a second, then fall away. One canister containing anti-personnel ordnance hit a two-room private elementary schoolhouse.

High School Boy To Face 67-Year Trapshoot Jinx

VANDALIA, Ohio (AP)—An Aisen, N.Y., high school student who won the big event at last year's Grand American Trapshooting Tournament will be battling a jinx and a huge field of sharpshooters when he defends his title here next week.

Daniel Paulter Jr. was only 16 when he copped the Grand American Handicap by breaking 99 of 100 targets from the 20-yard line.

Paulter's fancy shooting against the 3,000 other gunners in the competition nailed down the big prize money. But no one has ever won the Grand twice in the 67-year history of America's premiere shooting classic.

Amateur Trapshooting Association officials predict an all-time record entry that may exceed 3,500.

Three days of preliminary firing start the nine-day program Friday with regular events beginning on Monday.

In the Grand American, set for Friday, Aug. 26, participants gun from 18 to 27 yards out, depending on their handicaps.

Some other top names also are in the field. Buford Bailey of Big Springs, Neb., will be aiming for a third straight all-around title.

Winning the all-around means you rang up the best total scores on the 400 targets in the Clay Target Championship of America, the Grand American Handicap and the doubles championship.

Bailey won the honor last year with a score of 387. He crached 392 targets in 1964 and the little Nebraska cattle rancher also earned the clay target title in 1964.

Hiram Bradley, an English teacher from Greenville, Ohio, will defend his over-all championship. He shattered 959 of 1,000 birds in the week-long test a year ago.

Another hot shooter back is Gene Sears, the El Reno, Okla., sporting goods dealer who last year became the first man in ATA history to be high average in both 16-yard and handicap targets. On 5,350 targets, Sears clicked for a record .9631 average.

'Temporary' Editor On Job for 41 Years

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—"This is only temporary until I can line up a good experienced man," the editor of the Columbus Citizen told his young new sports editor.

Lew Byrer held the sports editorship, "still on that 'temporary' assignment," he used to joke, for 41 years.

Byrer, who retired in 1959, died in a nursing home Tuesday. He was 70 and death resulted from uremia, a complication of long standing diabetes.

Shamsky's Homer Bat To Be Put on Display

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Art Shamsky has lost his bat.

The Cincinnati Reds' utility outfielder got the word Tuesday that the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., wants the bat he used to slam four home runs in four consecutive times at bat against the Pittsburgh Pirates last Friday and Sunday. That tied a major league record held by several players.

REMODELED LANES — Circle D Recreation Center, E. Main St., has remodeled six bowling lanes. Six original lanes were built in 1938 and three more were added in 1959. The six older lanes were demolished and the new ones added. John Dietrich, co-owner with his son Larry, sweeps one of the new lanes while Jerry Graham, an AMF repairman, checks the pin-spotter. The lanes, ready for use tonight, will be officially opened with a match involving Circleville's top bowlers at 2 p. m. Sunday.

5 Ohioans Qualify for Amateur Test

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Five Ohioans and an Ohio State University player from West Virginia qualified Tuesday at Cincinnati and Huntington, W. Va., for berths in the 1966 U. S. Amateur Golf Championship while rain delayed the outcome of the Cleveland qualifier.

Ed Bradley of Cincinnati led the Queen City section with a 72 - 71 -143 over the par 70

Camargo Country Club course, four strokes better than his nearest rivals.

Rick Jones of Columbus, 1965 NCAA titlist for Ohio State overcame seven three-putt greens for 72 - 75 - 147, tying Ed Tutwiler, Indianapolis, Ind., who rallied for 79-68-147, and John Dunham of Cincinnati, 74-73-147.

Jets Maintain Lead in IL Race

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Columbus maintained its 2½-game International League lead over Rochester Tuesday night with a 3-1 victory over Toledo as the Red Wings were edging Toronto 8-6.

Buffalo shaded Syracuse 6-5 and Richmond nosed out Jacksonville 5-4.

Three-hit pitching of John Gelmar and Sam Jones produced the Jets' triumph. Dave Wissman drove in two runs with his seventh homer in the sixth inning and a single in the ninth.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Fair Princess missed a Scioto Downs record by one-fifth second Tuesday night as the 6-year-old mare won the five-eighth mile open dash in 1:14 4-5.

Bob Taylor drove the winner, owned by Ernest Shroyer of DeGraff, in the $1,200 once-around-the-track event, coming from behind for a 2¼-length margin.

Reds Spoil Rookie Bid For Laurels

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Dodger rookie Don Sutton had a good thing going until Cincinnati Reds catcher John Edwards stepped up to the plate in the sixth inning Tuesday night.

Edwards pumped out a single, ending Sutton's bid for a perfect game, but the young hurler went on to shut out the Reds 2-0. Sutton also ended a long dry spell by picking up his first victory since July 16.

He walked one and struck out seven and gave up only one other hit. That came in the eighth when Leo Cardenas hit a ground double.

Joe Nuxhall, taking the loss, had allowed on four hits before he was lifted in the eighth inning for a pinch hitter. Nuxhall is 4-3 and Sutton 10-11.

The Dodgers scoring was set up by Willie Davis, who belted a triple in the first inning. Nuxhall walked Jim Gilliam and Tommy Davis then drove in the runners with a single.

Shamsky's Homer Bat To Be Put on Display

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Art Shamsky has lost his bat.

The Cincinnati Reds' utility outfielder got the word Tuesday that the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., wants the bat he used to slam four home runs in four consecutive times at bat against the Pittsburgh Pirates last Friday and Sunday. That tied a major league record held by several players.

REMODELED LANES — Circle D Recreation Center, E. Main St., has remodeled six bowling lanes. Six original lanes were built in 1938 and three more were added in 1959. The six older lanes were demolished and the new ones added. John Dietrich, co-owner with his son Larry, sweeps one of the new lanes while Jerry Graham, an AMF repairman, checks the pin-spotter. The lanes, ready for use tonight, will be officially opened with a match involving Circleville's top bowlers at 2 p. m. Sunday.

5 Ohioans Qualify for Amateur Test

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Five Ohioans and an Ohio State University player from West Virginia qualified Tuesday at Cincinnati and Huntington, W. Va., for berths in the 1966 U. S. Amateur Golf Championship while rain delayed the outcome of the Cleveland qualifier.

Ed Bradley of Cincinnati led the Queen City section with a 72 - 71 - 143 over the par 70

Camargo Country Club course, four strokes better than his nearest rivals.

Rick Jones of Columbus, 1965 NCAA titlist for Ohio State overcame seven three-putt greens for 72 - 75 - 147, tying Ed Tutwiler, Indianapolis, Ind., who rallied for 79-68-147, and John Dunham of Cincinnati, 74-73-147.

the grade at Cincinnati were Andy Augaitis, Dayton, 71-78-149, and Stephen Falender, 16, Indianapolis, 75-75-150.

Bobby Littler Jr. of Athens was medalist at Huntington where he and Mike Good of Huntington, an OSU varsity golfer, were the only qualifiers. Littler had 69-74-143, one under Par at Guyan Golf Club and Good 71-73-144.

Jets Maintain Lead in IL Race

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Columbus maintained its 2½-game International League lead over Rochester Tuesday night with a 3-1 victory over Toledo as the Red Wings were edging Toronto 8-6.

Buffalo shaded Syracuse 6-5 and Richmond nosed out Jacksonville 5-4.

Three-hit pitching of John Gelnar and Sam Jones produced the Jets' triumph. Dave Wissman drove in two runs with his seventh homer in the sixth inning and a single in the ninth.

Mare Just Misses Scioto Downs Record

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Fair Princess missed a Scioto Downs record by one-fifth second Tuesday night as the 6-year-old mare won the five-eighth mile open dash in 1:14 4-5.

Bob Taylor drove the winner, owned by Ernest Shroyer of DeGraff, in the $1,200 once-around-the-track event, coming from behind for a 2¼-length margin.

Reds Spoil Rookie Bid For Laurels

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Dodger rookie Don Sutton had a good thing going until Cincinnati Reds catcher John Edwards stepped up to the plate in the sixth inning Tuesday night.

Edwards pumped out a single, ending Sutton's bid for a perfect game, but the young hurler went on to shut out the Reds 2-0. Sutton also ended a long dry spell by picking up his first victory since July 16.

He walked one and struck out seven and gave up only one other hit. That came in the eighth when Leo Cardenas hit a ground double.

Joe Nuxhall, taking the loss, had allowed on four hits before he was lifted in the eighth inning for a pinch hitter. Nuxhall is 4-3 and Sutton 10-11.

The Dodgers scoring was set up by Willie Davis, who belted a triple in the first inning. Nuxhall walked Jim Gilliam and Tommy Davis then drove in the runners with a single.

Denver Is Undecided about Gilchrist

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — There is virtually no chance that fullback Cookie Gilchrist will play for the Denver Broncos this season. But he still could be a vital asset.

The way the situation now stands the Broncos must take Gilchrist off the reserve list by Tuesday or they cannot use him this season.

However, they can trade him at any time, even if the Tuesday deadline passes.

Asked what the chances were that the Broncos would activate the 250-pound fullback who in four American Football League seasons never has gained less than 900 yards on the ground, Coach Mac Speedie said sharply:

"Nil. No one in our organization has heard from him. We don't even know what state or what country he's in. What we would like to do is trade him, but we won't trade him just to trade him."

The Broncos are trying to trade him for offensive or defensive lineman, and if they can accomplish that they apparently feel Gilchrist will have served his purpose.

Right now Denver is extremely short on linemen. All-League tackle Eldon Danenhauer has been lost for the season with a broken arm, and guard Bob McCullough may be lost with a pinched nerve in his neck.

The Broncos have shifted Ray Kubala from center to tackle, moved guard Jerry Sturm to center and installed rookie Pat Matson of Oregon at guard. John Hohman will be at the other guard spot and Bob Breitenstein at tackle.

The front four also figures to have two youngsters with Max Leetow, a sophomore pro out of Idaho, holding one defensive end post while rookie Robert Young of Howard Payne figures to hold the other. The tackles are veteran with Ray Jacobs and Charlie Janarete.

Arch Matsos, acquired from Oakland, and John Bramlett hold two of the linebacking spots while rookie Ron Sbranti of Utah State battles third-year vet Jay Thibert for the other. Veterans Willie Brown, John Griffin, Nemiah Wilson and Goose Gonsulin are holdovers at the defensive back spots, but rookies Gordie Sellers of Grambling and Bob Richardson of UCLA figure to nail one, and possibly two, spots.

The offense also has undergone a shake-up. With Gilchrist gone, Wendell Hayes, primarily a halfback last year, has shifted to the fullback spot. Abner Haynes has regained the other running back post but will have to hold off off-injured Charlie Mitchell.

Lionel Taylor is the split end, Al Denson the tight end and Bob Scarpitto the flanker. Who'll be throwing to them still remains somewhat of a question, but right now John McCormick is a step ahead of Mickey Slaughter.

Tiger

Lions' Coach Forgets Old Troubles

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Harry Gilmer operates on the theory there was no yesterday. Gilmer does his best to forget the recent past of the Detroit Lions and the growls of discontent that arouse from the players.

The contract disputes are over with the exception of guard Ted Karras. The dissidents, who walked out of camp are back in harness. Gail Cogdill's $1,000 fine still stands but his suspension for "remarks detrimental to the best interests of the club" was lifted long ago.

It was an open secret that the Lions' proud, proud defensive unit which led the league was openly critical of the offensive team which finished 14th and last in its specialty. There were those who put the blame on Milt Plum, the veteran quarterback, who was a target of the boo birds at Tiger Stadium.

"The biggest thing for a football club is team work," said Gilmer. "The spirit seems to be falling in line. We are working toward more unity."

"I think Plum is a good quarterback. He is my No. 1 man. He is going to be better. He was good enough to win before (1957 at Cleveland). When we had to choose between Milt and Earl Morrall, who went to New York, we took the one who could throw the best. Either one of them would have gone big at New York where they were hungry for a veteran."

Despite the 6-7-1 season, season ticket sales are over the 36,000 mark and will be close to the 38,700 of last year.

Backing up Plum, the Lions have veteran George Izo, Tom

Myers, a second year man from Northwestern and rookie Karl Sweeten of Wake Forest. Gilmer has been looking at all four.

Amos Marsh, who did a fine job last year after he was acquired from Dallas, will be one of the running backs. Tom Nowatzke, a second year man, has been pushing veteran fullback Nick Pietrosante and Bruce McLenna, Hillsdale, Mich. rookie, has caught Gilmer's eye. Joe Don Looney, who had his troubles on and off the field last year, has recovered from head injuries and is fighting for a running back job.

Cogdill is the split end, backed by John Henderson and a good-looking rookie, Bill Malinchak of Indiana. Pat Studstill is the flanker with Terry Barr retired, and Ron Kramer appeared to be winning the fight with Jim Gibbons for tight end until he was injured.

Ed Flanagan at center and John Gordy and John Gonzaga or Ted Karras at guards are set although Doug Van Horn of Ohio State and Bob Kowalkowski of Virginia have looked good.

Daryl Sanders is the left tackle and Roger Shoals may play right, depending on the comeback of J.D. Smith and the improvement of Jerry Rush, who has been played at both offensive and defensive tackle.

The retirement of Joe Schmidt, now an assistant coach, left a hole at middle line-backer and the assignment of Sam Williams to Atlanta in the expansion draft opened a gap at right end on defense. Mike Lucic or Wally Hilgenberg will take over for Schmidt and Larry Hand, a second year man, will replace Williams.

Bobby Thompson and Dick LeBeau will man the corners in the secondary and it will be Bruce Maher at strong safety and Wayne Rasmussen at free safety, backed by Tom Vaughn.

Mays Is Tied For Second as Homer Hitter

Willie Notches His 534th, Is Knotted with Foxx

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Willie Mays, on the threshold of becoming the greatest right-handed home run hitter in baseball history, says the long ones don't come as easy as they once did.

Mays tied Jimmy Foxx for second-place on the all-time list with his 534th Tuesday night, helping Gaylord Perry win his 19th game as San Francisco topped St. Louis 3-1.

"I think it's getting harder to hit home runs because of my age," Mays said. "I'm 35, you know. Sometimes I'm not strong enough to swing the bat good."

In spite of his advancing years, Mays' home run output has earned him the National League title in each of the last two years. In fact, the 52 he blasted last year marked his best one-season production ever.

Mays' 534th came leading off the third inning against left-hander Al Jackson. It was Willie's 29th this season and left him four behind Hank Aaron, the National League leader.

Foxx, who sent Mays a telegram congratulating him, said "I hope he hits 600."

"For 25 years they thought only left-handers could hit the long ones," Foxx continued. "I'm happy that another right-hander can prove he can hit."

Elsewhere, first place Pittsburgh blanked New York 3-0 in a game called by rain in the seventh inning. Philadelphia edged Chicago 5-3, Atlanta downed Houston 4-2 and Los Angeles blanked Cincinnati 2-0.

In the American League, Minnesota thumped California 8-1, Kansas City downed New York 6-2, Washington edged Cleveland 6-5 in 13 innings and Baltimore defeated Boston 6-4.

Mays' historic homer was worth $25, three autographed baseballs and a visit to the Giants' clubhouse to 18-year-old Henry Baren, who caught the ball as it sailed over the 375-foot sign in right-center field.

"It was a good pitch," said Jackson, who later struck Mays out on a fast ball. "I don't think he was guessing. You don't have to guess to hit a home run."

Lions' Coach Forgets Old Troubles

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Harry Gilmer operates on the theory there was no yesterday. Gilmer does his best to forget the recent past of the Detroit Lions and the growls of discontent that arouse from the players.

The contract disputes are over with the exception of guard Ted Karras. The dissidents, who walked out of camp are back in harness. Gail Cogdill's $1,000 fine still stands but his suspension for "remarks detrimental to the best interests of the club" was lifted long ago.

It was an open secret that the Lions' proud, proud defensive unit which led the league was openly critical of the offensive team which finished 14th and last in its specialty. There were those who put the blame on Milt Plum, the veteran quarterback, who was a target of the boo birds at Tiger Stadium.

"The biggest thing for a football club is team work," said Gilmer. "The spirit seems to be falling in line. We are working toward more unity."

"I think Plum is a good quarterback. He is my No. 1 man. He is going to be better. He was good enough to win before (1957 at Cleveland). When we had to choose between Milt and Earl Morrall, who went to New York, we took the one who could throw the best. Either one of them would have gone big at New York where they were hungry for a veteran."

Despite the 6-7-1 season, season ticket sales are over the 36,000 mark and will be close to the 38,700 of last year.

Backing up Plum, the Lions have veteran George Izo, Tom

Myers, a second year man from Northwestern and rookie Karl Sweetan of Wake Forest. Gilmer has been looking at all four.

Amos Marsh, who did a fine job last year after he was acquired from Dallas, will be one of the running backs. Tom Nowatzke, a second year man, has been pushing veteran fullback Nick Pietrosante and Bruce McLenna, Hillsdale, Mich. rookie, has caught Gilmer's eye. Joe Don Looney, who had his troubles on and off the field last year, has recovered from head injuries and is fighting for a running back job.

Cogdill is the split end, backed by John Henderson and a good-looking rookie, Bill Malinchak of Indiana. Pat Studstill is the flanker with Terry Barr retired, and Ron Kramer appeared to be winning the fight with Jim Gibbons for tight end until he was injured.

Ed Flanagan at center and John Gordy and John Gonzaga or Ted Karras at guards are set although Doug Van Horn of Ohio State and Bob Kowalkowski of Virginia have looked good.

Daryl Sanders is the left tackle and Roger Shoals may play right, depending on the comeback of J.D. Smith and the improvement of Jerry Rush, who has been played at both offensive and defensive tackle.

The retirement of Joe Schmidt, now an assistant coach, left a hole at middle line-backer and the assignment of Sam Williams to Atlanta in the expansion draft opened a gap at right end on defense. Mike Lucic or Wally Hilgenberg will take over for Schmidt and Larry Hand, a second year man, will replace Williams.

Alex Karras and Roger Brown at tackles and Darris McCord at left end are fixtures on defense.

Wayne Walker is the right line-backer and field goal man and Ernie Clark will be on the left, with rookie Bill Cody of Auburn a threat.

Bobby Thompson and Dick LeBeau will man the corners in the secondary and it will be Bruce Maher at strong safety and Wayne Rasmussen at free safety, backed by Tom Vaughn.

Mays Is Tied For Second as Homer Hitter

Willie Notches His 534th, Is Knotted with Foxx

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Willie Mays, on the threshold of becoming the greatest right-handed home run hitter in baseball history, says the long ones don't come as easy as they once did.

Mays tied Jimmy Foxx for second-place on the all-time list with his 534th Tuesday night, helping Gaylord Perry win his 19th game as San Francisco topped St. Louis 3-1.

"I think it's getting harder to hit home runs because of my age," Mays said. "I'm 35, you know. Sometimes I'm not strong enough to swing the bat good."

In spite of his advancing years, Mays' home run output has earned him the National League title in each of the last two years. In fact, the 32 he blasted last year marked his best one-season production ever. Mays' 534th came leading off the third inning against left-hander Al Jackson. It was Willie's 29th this season and left him four behind Hank Aaron, the National League leader.

The only man left with more home runs than Mays is the legendary Babe Ruth, who finished with 714. Ruth swung from the left side and helped build a power elite aura for left-handed hitters.

Foxx, who sent Mays a telegram congratulating him, said "I hope he hits 600."

"For 25 years they thought only left-handers could hit the long ones," Foxx continued. "I'm happy that another right-hander can prove he can hit."

Elsewhere, first place Pittsburgh blanked New York 3-0 in a game called by rain in the seventh inning. Philadelphia edged Chicago 5-3, Atlanta downed Houston 4-2 and Los Angeles blanked Cincinnati 2-0.

In the American League, Minnesota thumped California 8-1, Kansas City downed Chicago 4-2, Detroit whipped New York 6-3, Washington edged Cleveland 6-5 in 13 innings and Baltimore defeated Boston 8-4.

Mays' historic homer was worth $25, three autographed baseballs and a visit to the Giants' clubhouse to 18-year-old Henry Baren, who caught the ball as it sailed over the 375-foot sign in right-center field.

"It was a good pitch," said Jackson, who later struck Mays out on a fast ball. "I don't think he was guessing. You don't have to guess to hit a home run."

Chicago Boss, Luther King Plan Parley

CHICAGO (AP) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Mayor Richard J. Daley meet today to discuss open housing but not to seek a halt to the increasing number of protest marches.

Other civic and civil rights leaders were to participate in the conference as well.

The confrontation between King and Daley will be the first since July 11. At that time, King received no specific commitments on a list of civil rights demands.

The next day, riots broke out on the West Side. An expanding series of demonstrations began late last month.

Today's conference was called by the Chicago Conference on Race and Religion in an effort to resolve the question of alleged discrimination by real estate firms in Chicago.

The Rt. Rev. James W. Montgomery, bishop coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago and chairman of the CCRR, has reiterated the meeting is not intended to urge a halt to the marches.

Leaders of the Chicago open housing movement picketed several real estate firms on the Northwest Side Tuesday night and marched at five downtown agencies.

Ten persons were arrested at Jefferson Park where an effigy burned at a lamp post was labeled, "Martin Luther King" on one side and "Burn, Baby, Burn" on the other.

King, chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was not with the group of demonstrators who picketed the real estate firms.

Members of the American Nazi party mingled with the 800 jeering spectators and passed out "white power" pamphlets.

Earlier in the day, a group of Negroes visited some of the picketed real estate offices during business hours. At one agency, they were told a $25 deposit was required before they could be issued a list of available housing. The Negroes declined to pay the fee.

The downtown demonstrations occurred late in the afternoon and, as happened last Wednesday,

The World Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's never been anything quite like it: the mixup over the right of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to call witnesses in its investigation of protests against the American role in Viet Nam.

And because it cuts across the most delicate kind of ground—the separation of government powers, in this case the separation of the powers of the courts and Congress—almost surely nothing will come of it.

Between the two world war congressional investigations made headlines with inquiries into the Teapot Dome scandal, munitions, public lands. This as in the realm of business. After the war much of the investigating took a more personal turn. This was particularly true of investigations by the Committee on Un-American Activities.

The committee was first set up in 1938 on a year-by-year basis, became permanent with congressional action in 1945 and 1946. It could investigate practically anything from communism and the German-American Bund to atheism. It often was accused of acting as prosecuting attorney and jury, rolled into one.

Its tactics, like those of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, the Wisconsin Republican who headed a Senate subcommittee, were under attack for years. Some of the complaints the committee were that it exceeded its authority, that it was more interested in exposure than investigation, that it was trying to stifle free speech.

But in 1957 the Supreme Court ruled:

One Injured In Accident

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department investigated an injury accident Tuesday on Route 62 near Harrisburg.

Robert Todd Denton, Washington Court House, reported he was driving north on Route 62 when a southbound car attempted a left turn in front of him. The cars collided.

Joyce Denton, passenger in the Denton car, was referred to a physician after suffering injuries to her neck and left hand.

The driver of the other car, Woodrow Wilson Wells, Grove City, was cited by sheriff's deputies for failure to yield the right of way.

By James Marlow

A witness before a committee has a perfect right under the protection of the U.S. Constitution's fifth amendment against self-incrimination to refuse to answer a question which might incriminate him, but—

"The protections of the first amendment (free speech) do not afford a witness the right to resist inquiry in all circumstances. The critical element is the existence of, and the weight to be ascribed to, the interest of the Congress in demanding disclosure from an unwilling witness."

That didn't leave a witness much room.

In this case the House Committee on Un-American Activities, investigating activities against U.S. policies in Viet Nam, has subpoenaed 13 witnesses. Two of them got the American Civil Liberties Union to file suit to block the committee.

ACLU said the witnesses "have all been identified with diverse views antagonistic to the present administration's military policies."

"Their being called suggests an overall plan to discredit the peace movement and foreign policy dissent."

The ACLU set out to get a three-judge federal court to decide whether the action by which Congress created the House Committee—that is, the authority given it—was constitutional at all.

To do that, because time was short, ACLU first had to ask and convince a federal judge—in this case Howard F. Corcoran—to issue an injunction to forbid the committee to meet until the three-judge panel could consider the constitutional question. He issued the injunction Monday.

There was an uproar from Congress—this was interference of the courts in the business of Congress, House members cried. A special three-judge panel met Monday—the panel included Corcoran—and wiped out the injunction, letting the committee meet, which it said it would have done anyway, defying the court.

Now the other three-judge panel is still to meet but the answer seems pretty certain to be this: the judges won't tell the committee it can't call witnesses. The witnesses at the committee hearings would have to be convicted of contempt for refusing to answer before they could appeal on whether they should have had to answer at all.

A witness before a committee has a perfect right under the protection of the U.S. Constitution's fifth amendment against self-incrimination to refuse to answer a question which might incriminate him, but—

"The protections of the first amendment (free speech) do not afford a witness the right to resist inquiry in all circumstances. The critical element is the existence of, and the weight to be ascribed to, the interest of the Congress in demanding disclosure from an unwilling witness."

That didn't leave a witness much room.

In this case the House Committee on Un-American Activities, investigating activities against U.S. policies in Viet Nam, has subpoenaed 13 witnesses. Two of them got the American Civil Liberties Union to file suit to block the committee.

ACLU said the witnesses "have all been identified with diverse views antagonistic to the present administration's military policies."

"Their being called suggests an overall plan to discredit the peace movement and foreign policy dissent."

The ACLU set out to get a three-judge federal court to decide whether the action by which Congress created the House Committee — that is, the authority given it — was constitutional at all.

To do that, because time was short, ACLU first had to ask and convince a federal judge—in this case Howard F. Corcoran—to issue an injunction to forbid the committee to meet until the three-judge panel could consider the constitutional question. He issued the injunction Monday.

There was an uproar from Congress—this was interference of the courts in the business of Congress. House members cried. A special three-judge panel met Monday —the panel included Corcoran—and wiped out the injunction, letting the committee meet, which it said it would have done anyway, defying the court.

Now the other three-judge panel is still to meet but the answer seems pretty certain to be this: the judges won't tell the committee it can't call witnesses. The witnesses at the committee hearings would have to be convicted of contempt for refusing to answer before they could appeal on whether they should have had to answer at all.
